“WATER ACT, 1914.”

BEFORE THE BOARD OF INVESTIGATION.

In the Matter of all Streams in the North Saanich, South Saanich, Highland, Lake, Victoria, Esquimalt, Goldstream, Metchosin, Sooke, Otter, and Renfrew Land Districts; and in the Matter of all Streams in the Malahat Land District which drain into Juan de Fuca Strait or into Finlayson Arm of Saanich Inlet.

A MEETING of the Board of Investigation will be held at the office of the Board, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, on the 25th day of August, 1914, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all claims to water rights or privileges on the said streams which have been filed, all objections thereto, and the plans prepared for the use of the Board, will be open for inspection.

All persons interested are entitled to examine these and to file objections thereto in writing if they deem fit.

At this meeting claimants who have not previously done so shall prove their title to the lands to which their water records are appurtenant. This may be done by producing, in case of Crown-granted lands, the title deeds or a certificate of encumbrance; or in case of lands not held under Crown grant, by producing the pre-emption record, the agreement of sale, the mining record, or other documents of title.

Objections will be heard forthwith if the party objected to has received sufficient notice of the objection.

The Board at the said meeting will determine the quantity of water which may be used under each record, the further works which are necessary for such use, and will set dates for the filing of plans of such works and for the commencement and completion of such works.

And whereas there may be persons who, before the 12th day of March, 1909, were entitled to water rights on any of the said streams and yet have not filed statements of their claims with the Board of Investigation, such persons are required to file on or before the 17th day of August, 1914, at Victoria, before the hour set for the meeting, a statement as required by section 294 of the “Water Act, 1914.” Forms (No. 50 for irrigation and No. 51 for other purposes) may be obtained from any Government Agent in the Province.

Dated at Victoria, B.C., the 11th day of July, 1914.

For the Board of Investigation.

DOMINION ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA.

Monday, the 15th day of June, 1914.

PRESENT:

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE GOVERNOR-
GENERAL IN COUNCIL.

WHEREAS it is important, for the safety of human life and for the protection of property within Dominion Parks, that adequate regulations with respect to electrical installations should be in operation:

Therefore His Royal Highness in Council is pleased to order that the following Rules and Regulations, which are based on those of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, shall be and the same are hereby established for electrical installations within Dominion Parks.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

REGULATIONS.

Governing inside electrical installations, including also signalling systems; wireless telegraph apparatus, electric railway work, etc., within the Dominion Parks of Canada.

SECTION A.

ELECTRIC PLANT.

(All Potentials from 10 to 3,500 Volts.)

I. GENERATORS.

- (a.) Must be located in a clean, dry place, and be either remote from combustible materials or efficiently isolated therefrom.

In order to minimize, as far as possible, the danger of shock or fire, it is necessary in all instances to provide a suitable location. They should never be placed where any hazardous process is being carried on, nor in places where they would be exposed to inflammable gases or flyings of combustible material.

Should it be necessary to place a generator in the work-room of a plant where combustible material abounds, as in textile-mills, flour-mills, and such-like places, it must be cut off from the main room by means of a dust-tight enclosure.

It is suggested that water-proof covers be provided, which may be used in cases of emergency.

- (b.) Must, when operating at a potential in excess of 300 volts, have their base-frames permanently and effectually grounded. For potentials below 300 volts, the frames must be either properly grounded or efficiently insulated.

Where, on any generator operating at more than 150 volts, there are any exposed live parts which can be readily touched, such as brush-gear, terminals, etc., the Inspector may require that there be a suitable insulating platform of such dimensions that no person could readily reach such live parts without standing on the platform.

- (c.) Constant potential direct-current generators, except the exciters of alternating-current machines, must, and alternating-current generators may, be protected from excessive current by safety fusers or equivalent devices.

For two-wire direct-current generators, single-pole protection will be considered as satisfying the above rule, provided that the safety device is so located and connected that the means for opening it is actuated by the entire generator current, and that the action thereof will completely open the generator circuit.

If a generator, not electrically driven in a two-wire system, have one terminal grounded, the safety device above mentioned must be placed in the grounded lead.

If a balancer set be used in conjunction with a two-wire direct-current generator for the purpose of obtaining a neutral for a three-wire system, a protective device must be installed such that, should the voltages on the two sides of the system become excessively unbalanced, it will so operate as to disconnect the three-wire system.

- (d.) Must be provided with a name-plate, giving the maker's name, the normal rating in volts and amperes, and the normal speed in revolutions per minute and, if alternating current, the frequency in cycles per second, and the number of phases.

- (e.) Terminal blocks, when used on generators, must be made of incombustible, non-absorptive material, such as slate, marble, or porcelain.

This would not prevent the use of appropriate bushings to protect the lead wires if brought through the frames of generators.

- (f.) Conductors leading from generators to switch-boards must be in plain sight or readily accessible; they must also have a suitable insulating covering and be securely and rigidly supported in such a manner that they cannot come in contact with each other, in accordance with one or other of the methods of wiring described in Section B.

Inasmuch as it is not usual to provide circuit-breakers or other forms of protective devices between generators and switchboards, it is necessary that the foregoing regulation be observed.

The conductors may, of course, be run underground in water-tight conduit or tile duct, but unless such ducts can be kept dry the conductors must be lead covered.

II. STORAGE BATTERIES.

- (a.) Each storage-battery cell must be mounted on incombustible, non-absorptive insulators, such as glass or thoroughly vitrified and glaze porcelain.

- (b.) Battery-rooms must be thoroughly ventilated.

- (c.) The use of any metal liable to corrosion must be avoided in cell connections of secondary batteries.

Where the insulation on wires in battery-rooms would rapidly deteriorate owing to the action of acid fumes, bare conductors may be used. For protection against corrosion a suitable acid-proof coating should be applied to such conductors.

- (d.) Batteries must in all cases be provided with proper controlling and protecting apparatus.

The same precautions must be adopted in connection with battery installations as are necessary with current from any source of supply, especially as a battery, unlike a generator, is never at any time "dead."

III. SWITCHBOARDS.

- (a.) Panels of switchboards must be made of incombustible, non-absorptive, insulating material.

- (b.) Framework used for the support of switchboards must be substantially constructed of iron or steel.

- (c.) Must be so placed or of such construction and general arrangement as to reduce to a minimum the danger of fire and shock, burn, or other personal injury.

Switchboards must not be built down to the floor nor up to the ceiling; a space of at least 10 inches must be left between the floor and the board, and 3 feet, if possible, between the ceiling and the board. This is in order to prevent fire from communicating from the switchboard to the floor or ceiling, and also to prevent the forming of a partially concealed space, very liable to be used for storage of rubbish or oily waste.

Deviations from this rule may be permitted where the floor and ceiling are fire-proof.

This rule will require that switchboards be installed only in dry places.

- (d.) Ample space must be left around every switchboard.

Serious accidents are very liable to occur if men be compelled to work on live electrical apparatus, etc., in confined situations; hence the necessity for providing ample space.

Switchboards must be easily accessible from all sides if the connections be on the back (see Fig.

1.), but may, for small sizes, be mounted on a wall if the wiring be entirely on the face, provided that there is a space of at least 1 inch between the back of the board and the wall. Should there be, however, any live metal projections on the back of the board, such as switch terminals or other connections, this measurement must be taken from the nearest live part.

The object of this space is to prevent possible contact between the wall and the live parts, as this would be liable to cause leakage, and to prevent accumulation of moisture between the back of the board and the wall. This space must be enclosed with sheet metal or other suitable incombustible material in order to prevent objects of any kind from dropping or lodging behind and becoming a source of danger.

Fig. 1.

The space behind other switchboards must not be enclosed, either at the top, sides, or bottom, except with a suitable metal grating or netting.

For all potentials above 650 volts an enclosure as indicated above must be provided.

(e.) All cables, connections, resistances, etc., must be so situated as not to form any obstruction to the passage-ways around switchboards.

(f.) Where it is necessary to place bare bus-bars or any apparatus having exposed live parts, either on the wall or overhead, behind switchboards, they must be in no case less than 7 feet from the floor.

This does not refer to bus-bars, etc., directly attached to the back of a switchboard.

(g.) Where the potential does not exceed 650 volts, and the switchboard is of such dimensions as to require a man to go behind it for the purpose of repairs or attention, there must be a clear space of not less than 18 inches behind the wall and any live parts on the back of the switchboard.

By "clear space" is meant that the distance of 18 inches will be between the wall and the parts mentioned or any projecting pipe, apparatus, or other obstruction which may be attached to or form part of the wall.

For potentials between 650 and 3,500 volts this space must be at least 2 feet 6 inches, unless in any particular case it can be demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Inspector that a slight reduction will not materially increase the danger to any one who might have to carry out repairs or alterations behind the board.

(h.) For potentials from 150 to 650 volts all switchboards must either have an efficient insulating platform surrounding them, or all live parts of apparatus must either be remote from access or provided with suitable covers.

The platform called for in this rule must completely surround the switchboard, and the insulation thereby provided must be ample to afford sufficient protection against shocks. Platforms must be of rigid construction and have an even surface.

(i.) For potentials above 650 volts all live parts of switchboards must be either remote from access or protected by suitable covers, even if an insulating platform be provided.

For higher potentials than 650 volts insulating platforms are not sufficient protection against shock, and further precautions must be taken, as, for example, protection by a glass plate over instruments, grounded metal or insulating covers over switches, etc.

(j.) For potentials above 300 volts all exposed metal parts which do not carry current, including framework, switch-handles, instrument-cases, etc., must be permanently and effectually grounded if there be no insulating platform. For potentials above 650 volts such parts must be grounded even if there be an insulating platform.

This rule is of almost universal application, but there are certain cases where its enforcement would be detrimental or even defeat the object for which it is made; e.g., in electric railway work, if one pole only be brought to the switchboard, to ground the metalwork on such a board would be to reintroduce a risk which had purposely been obviated by the elimination from such board of the other pole. It is obvious that in such a case no advantage could be gained from the application of the rule.

(k.) All connections must be made with as little complication as possible.

Neatness and careful arrangement in this work is very essential and is conducive to safety. In many cases, particularly on large switchboards, it is desirable that the connections should be made more readily traceable by means of different colours or suitable tags.

(l.) All circuits except such as are permanently grounded must be provided with reliable ground detectors.

Detectors which indicate continuously and give an instant and permanent indication of a ground are preferable. Ground-wires from detectors must not be attached to gas-pipes within the building.

Where continuously indicating detectors are not adopted the circuits should be tested at least once per day, and preferably oftener.

In wiring switchboards the ground detector, volt meter, pilot lights, and potential transformers must be connected to a circuit of not less than No. 14 B. and S. gauge wire, which must be protected by fuses which will limit the current in the circuit to 660 watts.

In each case the fuses referred to in these circuits must be the smallest which circumstances will permit.

(m.) All feeder switches must be provided with proper labels which plainly indicate the destination or purpose of each circuit controlled thereby.

Card-holders, with plainly written cards, will comply with this rule.

(n.) All current-carrying parts of switchboards and their connections must be so proportioned, constructed, and arranged that no undue rise of temperature can occur.

This has special reference to bus-bars and other bare conductors used on switchboards, and indicates that they must be of sufficient size, and that good connections must be made; for instance, where two separate lengths of bus-bars are joined together, the contact area must be ample and the bars must be securely bolted or clamped together.

Thirty degrees Centigrade (86 deg. Fahr.) above the surrounding atmosphere will be considered a satisfactory limiting rise of temperature for this class of work.

IV. LIGHTNING-ARRESTERS.

(a.) Must be attached to each wire of every overhead circuit connected with any generating or transforming station.

This rule does not apply to lines known as "yard-wires," nor to ordinary overhead street service wires.

- (b.) Must be located in readily accessible places away from combustible materials, and as near as practicable to the point where the wires enter the building.

In all cases kinks, coils, and sharp bends in the wires, between the arresters and the outdoor lines, must be avoided as far as possible.

- (c.) Must be connected with a thoroughly good and permanent ground connection by metallic strips or wires.

Such strips or wires must have a current-carrying capacity not less than that of No. 6 B. and S. gauge copper wire, and must be run as nearly in a straight line as possible from the arresters to the ground connection.

Ground-wires for lightning-arresters must not be attached to gas pipes within buildings, nor be run inside of iron pipes, unless they are soldered or otherwise effectively connected thereto.

- (d.) All choke coils or other attachments inherent to lightning-protection equipment must have an insulation from the ground and from other conductors equal at least to the insulation demanded at other points of the circuit in the station.

V. TRANSFORMERS.

- (a.) Where installed inside of or attached to any building and where the potential on the high-tension side exceeds 300 volts, the cases of both air and oil-cooled transformers must be permanently and effectually grounded. For lower potentials they must either be properly grounded or effectually insulated.

This and the following rules do not apply to apparatus or fittings, the operation of which depends either wholly or in part upon special transformers embodied in the devices, nor to potential or current transformers.

- (b.) Must be located as near as possible to the point at which the primary wires enter the building.

Oil-cooled.

- (c.) Must be placed in fire-proof compartments and must be entirely remote from all combustible material.

The risk of fire, should the oil become ignited, is very great, as it would be very difficult to extinguish it.

Fire-proof compartments must be so made that oil could not leak out, and, in the case of large transformers, such compartments must have a suitable outlet, near the top, to the open air, to allow of the escape of gases and prevent possible explosion.

Inlet for fresh air is to be provided by a flue or iron pipe leading from the outside air and entering the vault at a point not less than 3 feet from the floor. In no case must the inlet be less in area than the equivalent of a 6-inch pipe.

Where practicable, such compartments must only be accessible from the outsides of buildings, and must have a sill on the floor, at the door opening, of such a height as to effectually prevent oil from overflowing through the doorway.

The floor should drain to one point, and may be connected to the drainage system or to an underground tank located outside the building.

An approved fire-door must be provided and equipped with a lock.

- (d.) Must not be located over roofs of any buildings, nor directly attached to the walls of frame buildings, but may be attached to brick, stone, or concrete walls or to metal walls not built on wooden framing.

Where no other location is practicable, they may, however, be supported on the walls of frame buildings on metal brackets, which will separate the transformers at least 2 feet from the nearest wood-work.

Care must be exercised, when locating transformers on walls, not to place them immediately under the eaves or woodwork of cornices, nor in the immediate vicinity of window or other openings.

Air-cooled.

- (e.) Must not be placed inside of any building excepting stations, if the highest available voltage of either the high or low tension winding exceeds 650 volts.

- (f.) Must be so mounted that the case will be at a distance of at least 1 foot from combustible material or separated therefrom by incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material, such as slate, marble, or soapstone.

This will require the use of a slab or panel somewhat larger than the transformer.

As it frequently happens that transformers are properly installed in the first instance, but that, later, combustible materials are placed or stored in the vicinity, they must be suitably partitioned off with incombustible material, which must in all instances surround the transformers, where there is any likelihood of this being done. A substantial wire netting is recommended as an effective protection.

VI. MOTORS.

- (a.) Motors and their equipment must be so located or protected as to reduce the risk of fire, and shock or other injury, to a minimum.

Where it is necessary to locate motors in dangerous proximity to inflammable materials, they should preferably be of the enclosed type; or they may be placed in a suitable enclosure which must be readily accessible, dust-proof, and sufficiently ventilated to prevent an excessive rise of temperature. Where practicable, the sides must be made largely of glass, so that the motor may be always plainly visible.

Starting devices, unless equipped with tight casings enclosing all current-carrying parts, in all dusty or linty places, must be enclosed in dust-tight, fire proof cabinets.

- (b.) The wiring to motors must be carried out in accordance with such rules as apply for the method of wiring adopted. (See Section B for "Low Potential Work" and "High Potential Work.")

The motor leads or branch circuits must be designed to carry at least 25 per cent. more current than that for which the motor is rated. Where the wires under this rule would be overfused in order to provide for the starting current, as is the case with many alternating-current motors, they must be of such size as to be properly protected by these large fuses.

The current used in determining the size of varying-speed alternating-current motor leads or branch circuits must be the percentage of the 30-minute current rating of the motor as given for the several classifications of services in the following table:—

Classification of Service.

	Percentage of Current Rating of Motor.
Operating valves, raising or lowering rolls, tool-heads, etc	200
Hoist, rolls, ore- and coal-handling machines	180
Freight-elevators, shop-cranes	160
Passenger-elevators	140
Rolling-tables, pumps	120

Varying speed motors are motors in which the speed varies automatically with the load, decreasing when the load increases, and vice versa. The term does not mean motors in which the speed is varied by the use of different windings or groupings of windings, or motors in which the speed is varied by external means, and in which, after adjustment to a certain value, the speed remains practically constant.

- (c.) Each motor and resistance box must be protected by a cut-out and controlled by a switch.

The fact as to whether the switch is "closed" or "open" must be plainly indicated.

Small motors may be grouped under the protection of a single set of fuses, provided that the current rating of the fuses does not exceed 6 amperes.

With motors of one-fourth horse-power or less, on circuits where the potential does not exceed 300 volts, single-pole switches may be used.

The switch and rheostat must, where practicable, be located within sight from the motor.

Where the circuit-breaking device on the motor-starting rheostat disconnects all wires of the circuit, the switch called for in this rule may be omitted.

Overload-release devices on motor-starting rheostats will be considered to take the place of the cut-out required by this rule, if they be inoperative during the starting of the motor.

An automatic circuit-breaker, disconnecting all wires of the circuit, may, however, serve as both switch and cut-out.

Where the starting current required for alternating-current motors up to, but not including, 5 horse-power does not exceed twice the normal full-load current, they may be protected by one set of fuses; but where it is necessary to fuse the circuit beyond this limit, and in sizes from 5 to 7½ horse-power, inclusive, they must be started with an approved form of double-throw switch, plainly indicating the starting and running sides, and constructed in such a way that the switch cannot be accidentally left in the starting position. The switch must be properly fused on the running side, but may be connected directly to the circuit on the starting side.

In larger sizes all alternating-current motors must be started with approved compensators or equivalent devices.

(d.) The frames of stationary motors must be grounded in the same manner and under the same conditions as called for under Rule (b), "Generators."

(e.) Must not be run in series-multiple or multiple-series, except on constant potential systems, and then only by written permission of the Inspector.

The objection to combinations of this character is that the cutting-out of one motor, by accident or carelessness, may subject the others to a current or voltage greater than that for which they are designed, and, should this occur and the protecting devices fail, as sometimes happens, there is very likely to be severe arcing, or a burn-out.

(f.) Must, when combined with ceiling fans, be hung from insulated hooks, or else there must be an insulator interposed between the motor and its support.

(g.) Must each be provided with a name-plate, giving the maker's name, the rating in volts and amperes, the normal speed in revolutions per minute, and, if for alternating current, the frequency in cycles per second, and the number of phases.

All varying (or variable) speed alternating-current motors, except those used for electric railway-car service, must be marked with the maximum current which they can safely carry for thirty minutes, starting cool.

(h.) Terminal blocks, when used on motors, must be of approved incombustible, non-absorptive, insulating material, such as slate, marble, or porcelain.

(i.) Adjustable speed motors, unless of special and appropriate design, if controlled by means of field regulators, must be so arranged and connected that they cannot be started under weakened field.

VII. ELECTRIC CRANES.

All wiring, apparatus, etc., not specifically covered by special rules herein given must conform to all such rules in these regulations as are applicable thereto, except that the switch referred to under "Motors," Rule (c), may be omitted.

1. Wiring.

(a.) All wires, except bare collector wires, those between resistances and contact plates or rheostats and those subjected to severe external heat, must be approved, rubber-covered, and not smaller in size than No. 12 B. and S. gauge. Insulation on wires between resistances and contact plates of rheostats, if subjected to severe external heat, must have approved slow-burning insulation.

(b.) All wires, excepting collector wires and those run in metal conduit or approved flexible cable, must be supported by knobs or cleats which separate them at least 1 inch from the surface wired over, but, in dry places, if space be limited and the requisite minimum separation cannot be obtained, each wire must be separately encased in approved flexible tubing securely fastened in place.

Collector wires must be supported on suitable insulators so mounted that even with the extreme movement permitted the wires will be separated at all times at least 1½ inches from the surface wired over. Collector wires must be held at the ends by suitable strain insulators.

(c.) Main collector wires carried along the runways must be rigidly and securely attached to their insulating supports at least every 20 feet, and separated at least 6 inches when run in a horizontal plane; if not run in a horizontal plane, they must be separated at least 8 inches. If spans longer than 20 feet are necessary, the distance between wires must be increased proportionately, but in no case shall the span exceed 40 feet.

(d.) Where bridge collector wires are over 80 feet long, insulating supports on which the wires may lie loosely must be provided at least every 50 feet.

Bridge collector wires must be kept at least 2½ inches apart, but a greater spacing should be maintained wherever practicable.

(e.) Collector wires must not be smaller in size than specified in the following table for the various spans:—

Distance in Feet between Rigid Supports.	Size Wire required, B. and S. Gauge No.
0 to 30	6
over 60	2

2. Collectors.

Collectors must be so designed that sparking between them and collector wires will be reduced to a minimum.

3. Switches and Cut-outs.

(a.) The main collector wires must be protected by a cut-out and the circuit controlled by a switch. The cut-out and switch must be so located as to be easy of access from the floor.

(b.) Cranes operated from cabs must have a cut-out and switch connected into the leads from the main collector wires and must be so located in the cab as to be readily accessible to the operator.

(c.) Where there is more than one motor on a single crane, each motor lead must be protected by a cut-out located in the cab.

4. Controllers.

Controllers must be installed according to the rules under "Resistances," except that if a crane be located out-of-doors, wires between resistances and contact plates of rheostats must have a rubber insulation where they are exposed to moisture, and also where they are grouped.

If a crane operate over readily combustible material, the resistances must be placed in an incombustible enclosure, thoroughly ventilated and so constructed that it will not permit any flame or molten metal to escape in the event of resistances burning out. If the resistances be located in the cab, this result may be obtained by constructing the cab of incombustible material and providing sides which enclose the cab from its floor to a height of at least 6 inches above the top of the resistances.

5. Grounding.

All exposed metal parts which do not carry current, including handles, covers, motor-frames, the entire frame of the crane, and the tracks, etc., must be permanently and effectually grounded.

6. Protection of Live Parts.

For potentials above 150 volts all live ungrounded parts of motors, apparatus, etc., must be so placed or guarded that they cannot be accidentally touched.

If it is impossible to place or guard the trolley-wires so as to comply with this rule, suitable warning notices must be placed in conspicuous situations.

SECTION B.INSTALLATION WORK.

(All Potentials from 10 to 3,500 Volts.)

I. APPARATUS, FITTINGS, FIXTURES, ETC.

For potentials up to 300 volts all live parts of apparatus and fittings must be so placed or protected that unauthorized persons will not be liable to accidentally receive shocks therefrom.

For potentials between 300 and 650 volts all such parts must be so placed or protected that unauthorized persons cannot come into accidental contact therewith.

For higher potentials, see "High-Potential Work."

1. Controlling and Protecting Apparatus.

(Switches and Cut-outs.)

- (a.) Switches and cut-outs must be in plain sight, or enclosed in an approved cabinet, and readily accessible; unless specially designed for use in damp places they must be located in dry situations. Where practicable, they should be grouped.

Must not be placed where exposed to mechanical injury nor in the immediate vicinity of easily ignitable stuff, nor where exposed to inflammable gases or dust, or to flyings of combustible material.

Where the occupancy of a building is such that switches, cut-outs, etc., cannot be located, so as not to be exposed as above, they must be enclosed in approved dust-proof cabinets with self-closing doors; oil switches, and circuit-breakers which have dust-tight casings, are excepted.

Key sockets will not be approved if installed over specially inflammable stuff, or where exposed to flyings of combustible material.

Remote control switches, where the means of control is accessible, will be considered as complying with the rule.

Single-throw knife switches must be so placed that gravity will not tend to close them. Double-throw knife switches may be mounted so that the throw will be either vertical or horizontal, as preferred; provided that, if mounted vertically, they be furnished with a suitable stop which will effectually prevent them from being closed by gravity.

When practicable, switches must be so wired that the blades will be "dead" when the switches are open.

Up to 250 volts and 30 amperes, indicating snap switches are preferable to knife switches for lighting circuits.

The use of open fuses will not be permitted, except on switchboards.

- (b.) Cut-outs must not be placed in the canopies or shells of fixtures.

- (c.) Single-pole switches must not be used for the control of outdoor signs, nor placed in the neutral of a three-wire system except in a two-wire branch or tap circuit, supplying not more than 660 watts.

When wiring for so-called three-wire switches, or any similar switches controlling lights from more than one point, they must be wired so that the terminals at any one switch will be single pole.

- (d.) Where flush switches or receptacles are used, whether with conduit systems or not, they must be enclosed in an approved box constructed of iron or steel in addition to the porcelain enclosure of the switch or receptacle.

No push-buttons for bells, gas-lighting circuits, or the like, shall be placed on the same wall-plate with switches controlling electric light or power wiring.

- (e.) Cut-outs must be placed at every point where a change is made in the size of wire (unless the cut-out in the larger wire will protect the smaller).

Fixture wire, or flexible cord of No. 18 B. and S. gauge, will be considered as properly protected by 6-ampere fuses.

- (f.) Must be so placed that no set of incandescent lamps requiring more than 660 watts, whether grouped on one fixture or on several fixtures or pendants, will be dependent upon one cut-out.

Exceptions may be made in the case of large fixtures.

- (g.) In three-wire, direct-current or single-phase systems, the fuses must be omitted from the neutral wires.

Under the above conditions, all branches or taps (from any such three-wire systems) which are directly connected to lamp sockets or other translating devices must be run as two-wire circuits, and every branch or tap must be so run if the difference of potential between the two outside wires be over 250 volts; in either case, both wires of such branch or tap circuits must be protected by proper fuses.

The neutral wire must, in all such cases, be at least equal in carrying capacity to that of the larger of the outside wires.

The neutrals of all such systems as are referred to in the rule must be grounded, in accordance with the rules in Section E, "Grounding," herein contained.

In isolated plants, operated under either of the three-wire systems referred to in the rule, the neutrals must be grounded and the foregoing requirements must be complied with.

The above shall also apply to motors, except that small motors may be grouped under the protection of a single set of fuses, provided that the current rating of the fuses does not exceed 6 amperes.

The fuses in the branch cut-outs, except for motors, as noted above, must not have a rating greater than that given in the following table:—

55 volts or less	12 amperes.
Over 55, but less than 125 volts.....	6 amperes.
125. to 250 volts	3 amperes.

For sign and outline wiring, supplied by circuits of 55 volts or less, branch circuit fuses of 25-ampere capacity may be used.

- (h.) The rating of fuses must not exceed the allowable current-carrying capacity of the wires as given in Tables A2 and B, "Conductors."

Circuit-breakers must not be set to operate at more than 30 per cent. above the allowable current-carrying capacity of the wire unless a fusible cut-out be also installed in the circuit.

Where rubber-covered wire is used for the leads or branches of alternating-current motors of the type requiring large starting currents, the wire may be protected in accordance with Table B, "Conductors," except when circuit-breakers equipped with time-element devices are installed.

- (i.) Each wire of motor circuits, except on a main switchboard or when otherwise subject to competent supervision, must be protected by a fuse whether automatic overload circuit-breakers be installed or not.

Single-phase motors may have one side protected by an approved automatic circuit-breaker only if the other side be protected by a fuse. For circuits having a maximum capacity greater than that for which enclosed fuses are approved the use of circuit-breakers alone will be permitted.

- (j.) On constant potential circuits all service switches and all switches controlling circuits supplying current to motors or heating devices and all cut-out (except as hereinafter described) must be so arranged that the cut-outs will protect, and the opening of the switch will at one operation disconnect, all the wires; that is, in a two-wire system the two wires and in a three-wire system the three wires.

For exceptions as to switches, see the rules under "Motors," "Heating Apparatus," "Electric Cranes," and as to cut-outs, those in this section relating to three-wire systems.

When installed without other automatic overload protective devices, automatic overload circuit-breakers must have the poles and trip coils so arranged as to afford complete protection against overloads and short circuits, and also if used in place of the switch must be so arranged that no one pole can be opened manually without disconnecting all of the wires.

(k.) Time switches, sign-flashers, and similar appliances must be of approved design and enclosed in an approved cabinet.

(l.) For potentials above 300 volts all exposed metal parts of controlling and protecting apparatus which do not carry current must be permanently and effectively grounded.

2. Resistances, Economy, Coils, etc.

(a.) Resistances, etc., must be so placed, or protected, that the risk of fire will be reduced to a minimum.

The normal working temperature of resistances and similar apparatus is usually high, so that an increase of current will very readily cause serious overheating, liable to set fire to adjacent material, if this be of a combustible nature. Such apparatus must therefore be protected by suitable covers of incombustible material, or they must be so placed that the risk of fire will be practically eliminated, either in the event of their being completely burned out, or remaining at an excessive temperature.

They must be placed on a switchboard, or at a distance of at least 1 foot from combustible material, or separated therefrom by a slab or panel of incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material, such as slate, soapstone, or marble, somewhat larger than the rheostat, which must be secured in position independently of the rheostat supports. Bolts for supporting the rheostat must be countersunk at least $\frac{1}{8}$ inch below the surface at the back of the slab and filled. For proper mechanical strength the slab should be of a thickness consistent with the size and weight of the rheostat, and in no case to be less than $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick.

If resistance devices are installed in rooms where dust or combustible flyings would be liable to accumulate on them, they must be equipped with dust-proof face-plates.

Where protective resistances are necessary in connection with automatic rheostats, incandescent lamps may be used, provided that they do not carry or control the main current, nor constitute the regulating resistance of the device.

When so used, lamps must be mounted in porcelain receptacles upon incombustible supports, and must be so arranged that they cannot have impressed upon them a voltage greater than that for which they are rated. They must in all cases be provided with a name-plate, which shall be permanently attached beside the porcelain receptacle or receptacles, and stamped with the candle-power and voltage of the lamp or lamps to be used in each receptacle.

(b.) Must be made entirely of incombustible materials, except such minor parts as handles, magnet insulation, etc., of rheostats. All segments, lever-arms, etc., must be mounted on incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material.

Rheostats used in dusty or dirty places or where exposed to flyings of combustible material must be so constructed that, even if the resistive conductor be fused by excessive current, the arc or any attendant flame will be quickly and safely extinguished. Rheostats used in places where the above conditions do not exist may be of any approved type.

(c.) Wherever insulated wire is used for connection between resistances and the contact plates of rheostats, the insulation must be "slow burning."

For large field rheostats and similar resistances, where the contact plates are not mounted upon them, the connecting wires must be run together in groups so arranged that the maximum difference of potential between any two wires in a group shall not exceed 75 volts. Each group of wires must either be mounted on incombustible, non-absorptive insulators giving at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch separation from the surface wired over; or, where it is necessary to protect the wires from mechanical injury or moisture, be run in approved lined conduit or its equivalent.

(d.) For potentials above 300 volts all exposed metal parts which do not carry current must be permanently and effectually grounded.

3. Heating Apparatus.

(a.) All electrical heating apparatus must be so constructed, placed, or protected that, whatever rise in temperature may occur, the risk of fire will be practically negligible.

Devices of this description will often require a suitable heat-resisting material placed between them and their surroundings. Such protection may best be secured by installing two or more plates of tin or sheet steel with 1 inch air-space between, or by alternative layers of sheet metal and asbestos with a similar air-space.

(b.) Must be protected by a cut-out and controlled by indicating switches. Switches must be double-pole, except when the device controlled does not require more than 660 watts of energy.

It is often desirable to connect in multiple with a heater, and between the heater and the switch controlling it, an incandescent lamp of low candle-power, as it shows at a glance whether the switch is open or not, and tends to prevent its being left closed through oversight.

(c.) Must never be concealed when it is practicable to have them exposed to view, and when concealment is necessary, it will only be permitted where there is no risk of fire.

(d.) For portable heating apparatus the flexible conductors must be connected to an approved plug device, so arranged that the plug will pull out and open the circuit in case any abnormal strain be put on the flexible conductor. This device may be stationary, or it may be placed in the cord itself. The cable or cord must be attached to the heating apparatus in such manner that it will be protected from kinking, chafing, or like injury at or near the point of connection.

(e.) Smoothing-irons, sad-irons, and other heating appliances that are intended to be applied to inflammable articles, such as clothing, must conform to the above rules as far as they apply. They must also be provided with an approved stand, on which they should be placed when not in use.

(f.) Must each be provided with a name-plate, giving the maker's name and the normal rating in volts and amperes.

(g.) For potentials above 300 volts all exposed metal parts which do not carry current must be permanently and effectually grounded.

4. Arc Lamps.

(a.) Must, when used on constant potential circuits, have a cut-out for each lamp or series of lamps.

The branch conductors must have a current-carrying capacity about 50 per cent. in excess of the normal current required by the lamp.

(b.) Incandescent lamps must not be used as resistances for arc lamps.

(c.) Where exposed to the flyings of inflammable material, none but the "enclosed" type of arc lamp will be permitted (which must be complete with inner and outer globes), and then only on constant potential circuits up to 650 volts.

In other locations, if outer globes, open at the top, be used, they must be provided with approved spark-arresters, or the carbons must be enclosed in a tight-fitting inner globe. If the outer globe be omitted entirely, the carbons must be enclosed in a tight-fitting inner globe.

The Inspector may require a wire netting around the outer globe of arc lamps, where there is evident danger from their being suspended overhead; as an illustration—in auditoriums, theatres, concert-halls, or any building where this form of lighting has been temporarily or permanently installed over an assemblage of people, where falling glass would constitute a serious danger.

- (d.) Where approved hanger-boards are not used, arc lamps, if suspended, must be hung from insulating supports other than their conductors.
- (e.) Arc lamps, when arranged to be raised or lowered, either for carboning or other purposes, must be connected up with stranded conductors from the last point of support to the lamp, when such conductors are larger than No. 14 B. and S. gauge.
- (f.) All arc lamps must be placed out of reach, except in the case of those used for photography or other like purposes.

5. Vapour Lamps.

(Enclosed Mercury Vapour Lamps.)

- (a.) Must have a cut-out for each lamp or series of lamps, except where contained in a single frame and lighted by a single operation, in which case not more than five lamps should be dependent upon a single cut-out.

(High Potential Vacuum Tube Systems.)

- (b.) The tube must be so installed as to be free from liability to mechanical injury or contact with inflammable material.
- (c.) High potential coils and regulating apparatus must be installed in an approved steel cabinet not less than $\frac{1}{10}$ inch in thickness, and well ventilated in such a manner as to prevent the escape of any flame or sparks in case of burn-out in the various coils. All apparatus in this box must be mounted on a slate base, and the enclosing case must be positively grounded. Supply conductors leading into this high potential case must be installed in accordance with the standard requirements governing low-potential systems, where such wires do not carry a potential of over 300 volts.

6. Portable Lamps.

- (a.) When portable lamps are used in places where they would be subjected to mechanical injury, they must be properly protected.

This will require the socket to be attached to a suitable wood or composition handle and metal guard. They must be of a type where the handle and guard are rigidly secured to one another, and there must be a hook, either on the guard or handle, to hang the lamp by when not in use. They must also be of a type in which the socket, as well as the lamp, is enclosed within the guard.

The rule only applies to portable lamps used in workshops, factories, warehouses, and places where such protection is necessary, and does not include portable lamps of the desk type, used in offices, residences, and similar places, where the portable lamp is in the form of a fixture equipped with a heavy base.

7. Cabinets.

(For Panel and Distributing Boards, Cut-outs and Switches.)

Design.

- (a.) Must be in all cases so constructed as to ensure ample strength and rigidity, and be dust-tight.

The hard usage to which cabinets are often subjected, especially during the process of installation, makes it necessary so to construct them that they will be strong enough to keep their shape, thus permitting doors to close tightly and making possible the proper installation of wiring and conduit.

When doors are of metal, and less than 0.109 inch (No. 12 U.S. sheet-metal gauge) in thickness, and are not lined with insulating material, there must be a space of at least 1 inch between the door and an enclosed fuse or any live metal part.

Except as specified above, there must be in all cases a space of at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch between the walls, back, or door of any cabinet and any exposed live metal part. Cabinets must be deep enough to allow the door to be closed when switches, rated at 30 amperes or less, are in any position, and when larger switches are thrown open, as far as their construction or installation will permit.

Material.

- (b.) May be either of cast or sheet metal, wood or approved composition, as follows:—

For metal conduit, armoured cables, or metal moulding work, only metal cabinets may be used.

For distributing centres, such as pockets for cut-outs and switches in "knob and tube" work, wood may be used, but must be lined with $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch solid asbestos card.

For the enclosure of sign-flashers, or any other apparatus, metal cabinets must be used.

For open wiring, under "ordinary conditions," wooden cabinets may be used for enclosing switches or cut-outs, but for all apparatus only metal may be employed.

Asbestos lumber may be used instead of lined wood, wherever wood is permitted.

Wooden cabinets.

- (c.) Wood must be well seasoned and at least $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in thickness, and be thoroughly filled and painted, and must be lined with an incombustible material as called for.

Linings.

- (d.) In all cabinets, linings of slate, marble, or approved composition must be at least $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thick and firmly secured in place; when metal is used for the lining it must be at least No. 16 U.S. sheet-metal gauge in thickness. For lining wooden cabinets $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch rigid asbestos board may be used when firmly secured in place by screws or tacks.

Composition Cabinets.

- (e.) Only approved material should be used, which must be in no case less than $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in thickness.

Metal Cabinets.

- (f.) If cast metal be used, a thickness of at least $\frac{1}{8}$ inch must be provided. Sheet metal must not be less than 0.0625 inch thick (No. 16 U.S. sheet-metal gauge), and must in every case be of sufficient thickness or so reinforced as to comply with Rule (a).

In steel cabinets having an area of more than 360 square inches for any surface, or having a single dimension greater than 2 feet, sheet metal must be used at least No. 14 U.S. sheet-metal gauge in thickness; in those having an area of more than 1,200 square inches for any surface, or having a single dimension greater than $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet, the sheet metal must be at least No. 12 U.S. sheet-metal gauge in thickness.

Doors.

- (g.) Must close against a rabbet or have flanges over edges so as to make cabinets dust-tight.

Hinges must be of strong and durable design. A substantial latch or catch must be provided, so as to keep the door closed, and a lock may be used in addition to the catch if desired.

When doors have glass panels, the glass must be at least $\frac{1}{8}$ inch thick (commercial thickness) and must not have a greater area than 450 square inches, unless plate glass at least $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in thickness is used.

8. Fixtures.

- (a.) Fixtures must not, except as hereinafter described, be wired with less than No. 18 B. and S. gauge wire, which must have an approved insulating covering.

This rule will be strictly enforced, except that, in the case of small fixtures, where it is impossible to have the stems or arms large enough to contain No. 18 B. and S. gauge wire, No. 20 wire will be permitted as a minimum. This refers to the wiring of delicate fixtures and small figures where their use is confined to residences, or other places where they would be likely to receive equally careful treatment, and where they would also be free from mechanical injury and moisture. Such wires must be wholly contained within the fixture, and must not be damaged in drawing in.

In wiring certain designs of show-case fixtures, ceiling bull's eyes and other appliances in which the wiring may be exposed to temperatures in excess of 120 deg. Fahr., from heat of the lamps or other causes, a slow-burning insulating covering must be used. All such forms of fixtures must be submitted for examination, test, and approval before being installed for use.

- (b.) Supply conductors, and especially the splices to fixture wires, must be kept clear of the grounded part of gas-pipes, and where shell or outlet boxes are used, they must be made sufficiently large to allow the fulfilment of this requirement.
- (c.) Wires must, when on the outside of a fixture, be so secured as not to be cut or abraded by the pressure of the fastenings or motion of the fixture.
- (d.) Under no circumstances must there be a difference of potential of more than 300 volts between wires contained in or attached to any fixture.
- (e.) When supported from any grounded metal-work, or when installed on metal walls or ceilings, or on plaster walls or ceilings containing metal lath, or on walls or ceilings in fire-proof buildings, must be insulated from such supports by approved insulating joints placed as close as possible to the ceilings or walls.

The insulating joint may be omitted in conduit armoured cable or metal moulding systems with straight electric fixtures in which the insulation of conductors is equivalent to the insulation in other parts of the system, and provided that approved sockets, receptacles, or wireless clusters are used of a type having porcelain or equivalent insulation between live metal parts and outer metal shields if any.

Wires must be protected above the insulating joint by approved insulating tubing, and where such tubing is used it must be of sufficient length to extend below the insulating joint, and must be so secured that it will not be pushed back when the canopy is put in place.

When insulating joints are required, fixture canopies of metal in fire-proof buildings must be thoroughly and permanently insulated from metal walls or ceilings, or from plaster walls or ceilings on metal lathing.

- (f.) Canopies and back plates of all fixtures must be so designed as to afford ample room for joints, and they must be readily removable for purposes of inspection.

For instance, if a so-called flat back plate be furnished with any fixture, it must be provided with a suitable outlet box of sufficient size, which can be let into the wall or ceiling; to provide only the back plate and cut a hole behind it in plaster or brickwork, etc., will not be approved.

- (g.) Fixtures must be made of metal or hardwood, except that other approved material may be used if reinforced with metal or otherwise so constructed as to ensure requisite mechanical strength.

In all cases the mechanical strength must be practically equivalent to an all-metal fixture of similar size and form.

- (h.) All arms must be reliably secured to prevent turning. Arms of threaded tubing must not be lighter than No. 18 B. & S. gauge, and with screw joints of arms there must be not less than five threads, all engaging. All methods of fastening arms or making joints between metal parts by soldering, brazing, or otherwise must be such as to ensure in every case ample strength and reliability.
- (i.) No canopy or other part of any fixture must contain a receptacle or other device having any exposed live parts.
- (j.) All burrs, fins, and sharp edges liable to injure wire coverings must, where practicable, be removed or rounded, but in every case it must be possible to pull in and also to withdraw the wires without injuring them.

Where supply-wires enter fixture stems or casings there must be suitable fittings, having smooth, rounded edges, to prevent injury to the wire coverings.

Where fixtures are made of wood or other combustible material, wireways must be metal-lined unless approved armoured conductors, with suitable fittings, be used.

On chains or similar parts where conductors are not completely enclosed in metal, wires must be stranded and must have rubber insulation not less than $\frac{1}{32}$ inch in thickness, or pendant cord may be used.

9. Flexible Cord.

- (a.) Must have an approved insulation and covering.

Under this rule not only must flexible cord be what is known as "approved," but it must be of a type approved for the purpose for which it is to be used.

- (b.) Must not, except where permitted in street-railway property, be used where the difference of potential between the wires is over 300 volts.
- (c.) Must not be used as a support for clusters, nor must any device be attached which will impose an injurious strain on either the cord or fittings.
- (d.) Must not be used except for pendants, wiring of fixtures, portable lamps or motors, and portable heating apparatus.

For all portable work, including those pendants which are liable to be moved about sufficiently to come in contact with the surrounding objects, flexible wires and cables, especially designed to withstand this severe service, must be used.

- (e.) Must not be used in show-windows or show-cases except when provided with an approved metal armour.
- (f.) Must be protected by insulating bushings where the cord enters the sockets, or at similar points in other devices, if not otherwise protected.
- (g.) Must be so suspended that the entire weight of the socket and lamp will be borne in some approved manner under the bushing in the socket, and above the point where the cord comes through the ceiling block or rosette in order that the strain may be taken from the joints and binding screws.
- (h.) Except as provided under "Fixtures," must never be of less size than the equivalent of No. 18 B. and S. gauge.

10. Floor Receptacles.

- (a.) In all conduit work floor receptacles must be of the type known as water-tight.

These generally consist of a solid cast-iron box threaded to receive the conduit pipe and provided with a form of plug which is protected from mechanical injury by a stout brass shield which screws into the top plate of the box through which the cord enters. When not in use this metal shield can be screwed out and a flat disk screwed into its place, leaving a smooth, flat, water-tight surface, even with the floor.

In other than conduit work, floor boxes must be as approved for switches and receptacles, and the receptacles must be of the self-closing protected plug type.

This requires a form of plug which is reinforced by some rigid and substantial means which will protect the removable part from mechanical injury and in which the openings will automatically close tight when the removable part is withdrawn.

11. Conductors;

Allowable Current-carrying Capacities.

- (a.) The following table, showing the allowable current-carrying capacity of copper wires and cables of 98 per cent. conductivity according to the standard adopted by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, must be followed in placing interior conductors.

For insulated aluminium wire the safe current-carrying capacity is 84 per cent. of that given in the following tables for copper wire, with the same kind of insulation:—

The lower limit is specified for rubber-covered wires to prevent gradual deterioration of the high insulations by the heat of the wires, but not from fear of igniting the insulation. The question of drop is not taken into consideration in the above tables.

- II. WIRING UNDER ORDINARY CONDITIONS.
1. General.
- (a.) Wires must not be of a smaller size than No. 14 B. and S. gauge, except as allowed for fixture work and pendant cord.
- (b.) For tie wire only approved insulated wire must be used.
- (c.) Wires must be so spliced or joined as to be both mechanically and electrically secure without solder.
- The joints must then be soldered, unless made with some form of approved splicing device, and covered with an insulation equal to that on the conductors.
- (d.) Stranded wires (except in flexible cords) must be soldered before being fastened under clamps or binding screws, and whether stranded or solid, when they have a conductivity greater than that of No. 8 B. and S. gauge copper wire, they must be soldered into lugs for all terminal connections, except where an approved solderless terminal connector is used.
- (e.) Wires must be separated from contact with walls, floors, timbers, or partitions through which they may pass by tubes of incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material, such as glass or porcelain, excepting at outlets, where approved flexible tubing is required.

Bushings must be long enough to bush the entire length of the hold in one continuous piece, and each end must project at least 1/2 inch, or else the hole must be first bushed by a continuous water-proof iron tube. This tube may be a conductor, such as iron pipe, but in that case an insulating bushing must be pushed into each end of it, extending far enough to keep the wire absolutely out of contact with the pipe. Such bushings must be properly secured in position.

(f.) Conductors, when not protected by approved conduit, moulding, or armouring, and where liable to come in contact with gas or water pipes or other conducting material, must be separated therefrom by some continuous and firmly fixed non-conductor, creating a permanent separation.

They must not come nearer than 6 inches to any other electric lighting, power, or signalling wire, not protected as above, without being permanently separated therefrom by some continuous and firmly fixed non-conductor.

The non-conductor used as a separator must be in addition to the regular insulation on the wires.

Where tubes are used they must be securely fastened at the ends to prevent them from moving along the wires.

(g.) Conductors must be so arranged in wet places that an air-space will be left between them and pipes or other obstructions in crossing, and must be run in such way that they cannot come in contact with such obstructions accidentally.

Wires should be run over, rather than under, pipes, etc., upon which moisture is likely to gather and which might therefore cause trouble on a circuit.

(h.) Wires must not be run in elevator-shafts where the potential exceeds 650 volts, and below this potential they must be run in approved conduit, or armoured cable must be employed.

(i.) Must be rigidly supported on incombustible, non-absorptive insulators, which will separate the wires from each other, and from the surface wired over, in accordance with the following table:—

Voltage.	Distance from Surface.	Distance between Wires.
0 to 300 ...	1/2 inch	2 1/2 inches
301 to 650 ...	1 inch	4 inches
651 to 2,500..	2 inches	6 inches
2,501 to 3,500..	3 inches	9 inches

Rigid supporting requires, under ordinary conditions where wiring along flat surfaces, supports at least every 4 1/2 feet. If the wires are liable to be disturbed, the distance between supports must be shortened. In buildings of mill construction, mains of not less than No. 8 B. and S. gauge, where not liable to be disturbed, may be separated about 6 inches, and run from timber to timber, not breaking around, and may be supported at each timber only.

Must not be "dead-ended" at a rosette socket or receptacle, unless the last support is within 12 inches of the same.

This is in order to relieve terminals of strain due to the weight or pull of conductors. In no case, however, must any wire, if accidentally disconnected from its terminal, be liable to come into dangerous proximity to any conducting material. A similar precaution must be taken wherever one conductor is tapped off another, as in "T" joints and cord pendants, in order that the point of junction may be relieved from strain.

(j.) Wires of No. 8 B. and S. gauge or over must not be supported on split knobs.

Solid knobs or strain insulators must be used for all wires at the ends of runs where conductors are terminated. Except with high potentials, split knobs or cleats must be used for the support of conductors smaller than No. 8 B. and S. gauge, except at the ends of runs.

Knobs or cleats which are arranged to grip the wire must be fastened by screws, which must be long enough to penetrate the woodwork not less than one-half the length of a knob and fully the thickness of a cleat. The screws must be of the largest gauge appropriate to the holes in the insulators.

- (k.) Unused ends of insulated conductors, such as those at switch and fixture outlets, must not be left uninsulated.
- (l.) In dark rooms, lavatories, basements, and places where a person would be liable to receive a shock when handling electric fittings, the shells of sockets, pendant switches, plugs, and receptacles must be of porcelain or other approved insulating material, unless the fixtures or sockets, etc., are out of reach or controlled by wall switches.

2. Services and Service Meters.

Under this heading are included rules covering the installation of all service-wires, either overhead or underground, and the fittings in connection therewith, brought into or attached to any building for the supply of electrical energy thereto.

- (a.) An approved switch and cut-out must be placed on all service wires, whether these be overhead or underground. Such switch and cut out must be located inside the building at the nearest accessible point to the place where the service-wires enter, and they must be arranged to cut off the entire current from the circuits which they control.

The arrangement of cut-out and switch must be such that the service-wires first enter the former, and both must cut off current from all devices, including meters.

In private plants the yard-wires running from building to building are not considered as service-wires, so that switches and cut-outs would not be required in each building at the point of entry, provided that—

1. There are other switches conveniently located on the mains, or that the generators are at hand.
2. The next cut-out back is small enough to properly protect the wires inside the building in question.

- (b.) Service cut-outs must always be enclosed in an approved iron or steel box and sealed under the control of the supply authority.

This will not prevent the consumer from controlling his own branch fuses, or even auxiliary service-fuses, but the main source of supply must be equipped with fuses under seal which must not be broken, except by the supply authority.

In order to obviate the inconvenience which would otherwise be caused, should the service-fuses blow rather than the consumer's own fuses, the former may be of slightly higher rating than that which would be necessary to properly protect the installation.

- (c.) Where the potential exceeds 150 volts all live parts of service equipment, including cut-outs, switches, and meters, must be so protected that accidental contact therewith will be effectually prevented.

Where such apparatus is located in any portion of a building not accessible to other than authorized persons, such as the electric service-room, engine-room, or any similar location, where it would be under the care and operation of skilled persons, or people familiar with the nature of such apparatus, it will be considered as complying with the rule. In other locations, such as residences, or any other building where any one would be likely to come accidentally in contact with live parts, or where conducting material might be liable to fall across the live parts, or to be accidentally brought into contact with same, such apparatus must be enclosed in an approved cabinet.

Certain enclosed forms of switches which can be operated by a handle without removing the cover are on the market, and are considered preferable to enclosure in a cabinet, as are also similar forms of combined switches and cut-outs.

- (d.) Must be protected against moisture and mechanical injury, and all combustible material must be kept from the immediate vicinity of the point of entrance in a building.
- (e.) Not more than one service of the same potential must be run from overhead into any building from the same system, except as hereinafter provided.

Unless it can be demonstrated that compliance with this requirement in any particular instance is impracticable, the rule must be observed.

This rule is to prevent indiscriminate and unnecessary multiplication of services entering buildings from overhead, which becomes a serious menace to firemen and greatly increases the risk of fire to the building itself.

Where connected to other than a conduit system, the inside as well as the outside end of a service-pipe must be provided with approved fittings, which bush the wires separately with porcelain at the point of issue.

In all cases the pipe must be securely attached to the outside wall of building, and, unless circumstances will not permit, it must be continued up, so that the service head will be at least 20 feet from the ground. The pipe is to be permanently and effectually grounded as for conduit systems.

Where short lengths of conduit are used to bring in service-wires, the same general precautions must be observed, except that, where the potential does not exceed 650 volts, and where they cannot be reached from the ground outside, or touched by a person standing on or in contact with any material, either inside or outside the building through which any one would be liable to receive a shock, such short lengths need not be grounded.

All holes made in walls for the insertion of service-pipes must be effectually closed around the pipe, so as to prevent water from following along the outside of the pipe into the building.

Suitable stand-pipes must therefore be installed in any building where electric services are required in various parts thereof.

- (f.) Overhead service-wires, where they enter buildings, must have drip-loops outside, and the holes through which the conductors pass must be bushed with incombustible, non-absorptive insulating tubes slanting upwards towards the inside.

Where possible, these tubes must be kept apart a distance of not less than 12 inches; in no case less than 6 inches for low potentials, and never less than 12 inches for high potentials.

For low-potential systems the service-wires may be brought into buildings through a single iron conduit; the conduit to be equipped with an approved service head.

Great care must be exercised in bringing service-wires through conduit, especially where such wires are not protected by fuses outside the building, as short circuits between the wires or between the wires and pipe produce serious arcing, and consequent danger of fire.

Special care must be taken when drawing in conductors to prevent any abrasion of the insulation, and the joints in the pipe must be water-tight.

In all cases the service conduit pipe must, where conduit wiring is used inside a building, enter a steel cabinet enclosing the main fuses, etc. It is necessary that this cabinet be installed in such a way that there will be none of the service conduit projecting through the wall, other than is required for attachment directly to the cabinet, either by threading or by lock nuts. (See Fig. 2.)

- (g.) That portion of service-wires from service cut-outs to the point at which they join an aerial service must in no case have a current-carrying capacity less than that of No. 12 B. and S. gauge copper wire, and such capacity must in no case be less than that of the consumer's mains connected thereto.

- (h.) Where the difference of potential between any two wires or between any wire and ground in a service-pipe is between 150 and 650 volts, such wires must not only comply with all rules for conduit wiring, but the insulation must be that required for the primary voltage of the line, and in no case less than that required for operating under 2,500 volts.

This rule is necessary owing to the fact that service-wires usually are not protected, as is the case with inside wires, and any short circuit between wires and the pipe, or leakage to ground, may result in serious damage. The rule therefore requires that for sizes larger than No. 12 B. and S. gauge the wire be stranded, rubber-covered, with a double braid, not drawn in until all mechanical work on the pipe is finished, and the rubber insulation to be of the high-voltage grade.

- (i.) Where the difference of potential is between 650 and 3,500 volts, and where services from overhead lines are brought into buildings, the following requirements must be observed:—

1. The point where overhead wires enter conduit must not, where practicable, be less than 20 feet from the ground.
2. Conductors must be lead-sheathed, and the insulation must in no case be of a grade lower than that required for 3,500 volts.
3. Conduit and sheathing must be well bonded and permanently and effectively grounded.
4. Must, where wires issue from sheathing, be protected from moisture by a pot-head or other approved device.

5. Service-wires must be so located that they cannot be reached from any window or balcony or other points wherefrom any unauthorized persons might be able to touch them; or otherwise they must be properly protected, so that the same object will be attained.

- (j.) Must not be so arranged as to shunt the current through a building around any catch-box.
- (k.) Where an underground service enters a building through tubes, the tubes must be tightly closed at outlets with asphaltum or other non-conductor, to prevent gases from entering the building through such channels.
- (l.) No underground service from a street to a building shall supply more than one building, except by written permission from the Inspector.
- (m.) In any case where an installation, or portion thereof, is arranged to be supplied with current from two or more different sources, the switch, or switches, employed to control the supplies to such installation must be so constructed or arranged that it will be impossible for any one to accidentally switch on current from one source before that from another has been cut off.

The above rule would not prevent the paralleling of two services from the same source of supply, but is intended to prevent entirely different systems from becoming crossed with each other.

- (n.) Service meters must be located where they will be accessible, and as near the service switch and fuses as circumstances will permit. Unless otherwise enclosed in a fire-proof cabinet, they must be mounted in such a way that, should they become abnormally heated through accident, overload, or other cause, they could not communicate fire to any adjacent combustible material.

To attain this end it is necessary to provide a suitable meter-board, covered with $\frac{1}{8}$ inch asbestos card, the full size of the board.

Where the difference of potential between any two conductors does not exceed 150 volts, and where this board is not in such a location that the apparatus thereon would become a source of danger to unauthorized persons (see Rule (c)) it may be uncovered, as shown.

Where these conditions do not obtain and it is necessary to cover such apparatus, it must be treated in the manner illustrated in Fig. 2.

In the case of conduit, armoured cable, or metal-moulding wiring, the cabinet must be of iron or steel, but with open wiring, etc., it may be of wood, or other approved material, if properly lined with suitable fire-proof material.

The examples illustrated in the foregoing cuts, while showing the general requirements of the rule, need not be adhered to in all details of design, so long as the general principle is carried out. For instance, the cabinet shown in Fig. 2 may be large enough to accommodate not only the main switch and fuses, but also the meter and, if desired, a number of branch cut-outs.

3. Low Potential Work.

(10 to 650 Volts.)

Any circuit attached to any source of power which develops a difference of potential between any two wires of over 10 volts and less than 650 volts shall be considered as a low potential circuit, and as coming under this class.

General.

- (a.) Wires, when entering cabinets, must be protected by approved bushings, which fit tightly the holes in the box and are well secured in place.

The wires should completely fill the holes in the bushings, so to keep out dust; tape may be used to build up the wires if necessary. In concealed knob and tube work, approved flexible tubing will be accepted in lieu of bushings, provided that it extends from the last porcelain support into the cabinet.

- (b.) Wires must not be laid in plaster, cement, or similar finish, and must never be fastened with staples.

- (c.) Must not be fished for any great distance, and only in places where an Inspector can satisfy himself that the rules have been complied with.
- (d.) Twin wires must never be used except in conduit or where flexible conductors may be necessary.
- (e.) Conductors must, where exposed to mechanical injury, be suitably protected.

When crossing floor timbers in cellars, or any rooms where they might be exposed to injury, the wires must be attached by their insulating supports to the under-side of a wooden strip, not less than $\frac{1}{2}$ inch in thickness, and not less than 4 inches in width. Instead of running boards, guard strips on each side of and close to the wires will be accepted. These strips are to be not less than $\frac{7}{8}$ inch in thickness, and at least as high as the insulators.

Protection on side-walls must extend not less than 5 feet from the floor, and must consist of substantial boxing, retaining an air-space of not less than 1 inch around the conductors, closed at the top (the wires passing through bushed holes), or approved metal conduit or pipe of equivalent strength must be used.

When metal conduit or pipe is used, the insulation of each wire must be reinforced by approved flexible tubing extending from the insulator next below the pipe to the one next above it, unless the conduit be installed according to the rules on conduit wiring (Rules (c) and (e) thereof excepted) and the wire is approved for conduit use. The two or more wires of a circuit, each with its flexible tubing (when required), must be placed within the same metal pipe. Special permission for deviation from this last requirement may be granted in the case of direct-current circuits.

In damp places, wooden boxing may be preferable, because of the precautions which would be necessary to secure proper insulation if metal pipe were used. With this exception, however, metal piping is considered preferable to the wooden boxing; it is especially suitable for the protection of wires near belts, pulleys, etc.

- (f.) Wires, when run in roof spaces, will be considered as concealed, and when run in close proximity to water tanks or pipes will be considered as exposed to moisture.

Wires in such spaces are considered as exposed to mechanical injury, and must not be run on knobs on the upper edges of joists.

Open Wiring.

- (a.) Wires must have approved rubber, slow-burning weather-proof, or slow-burning insulation.

A slow-burning covering, that is, one that will not carry fire, is considered good enough where the wires are entirely on insulating supports. Its main object is to prevent the conductors from coming accidentally in contact with each other or anything else.

Where rubber insulation is used and covered with a flame-proof or other braiding, such braiding or flame-proofing must be stripped back on all wires or cables, a sufficient amount to give the necessary insulation distances for the voltage of the circuit on which such wires are used. This requirement applies with equal force to joints in wires or cables, or where such conductors are sweated into connectors or lugs.

- (b.) Sub-bases of incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material, which will separate the wires at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from the surface wired over, must be installed under all snap-switches used in exposed knob and cleat work.

Concealed Knob and Tube Work.

- (a.) All wires must have an approved rubber insulating covering.
- (b.) Wires must be rigidly supported at a distance of at least 1 inch from the surface wired over, and must be kept at least 5 inches apart.

They should preferably be run singly on separate timbers, or studding, and must be separated from contact with walls, floors, timbers, and partitions, through which they may pass, by tubes of incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material, such as glass or porcelain. Wires passing through the cross-timbers in plastered partitions must be protected by an additional tube extending at least 4 inches above the timber.

At distributing centres, outlets, or switches, where space is limited, and the 5-inch separation cannot be maintained, each wire must be separately encased in a continuous length of approved flexible tubing.

- (c.) When, in a concealed knob and tube system, it is impracticable to place the whole of a circuit on incombustible supports of glass or porcelain, that portion of the circuit which cannot be so supported must be installed with approved metal conduit, or approved armoured cable; except that if the difference of potential between the wires is not over 300 volts, and if the wires are not exposed to moisture, they may be fished if separately encased in approved flexible tubing, extending in continuous lengths from porcelain support to porcelain support, from porcelain support to outlet, or from outlet to outlet, and wires must, except where taps are necessary, be in continuous lengths, without joints throughout.

- (d.) When using either conduit or armoured cable in combination with concealed knob and tube work, the requirements for either conduit work or armoured cable work must be complied with, as the case may be.

- (e.) Wires must, at all outlets, except where conduit is used, be protected by approved flexible tubing, extending in continuous lengths from the last porcelain support to at least 1 inch beyond the outlet.

The proper finishing of wires at outlets is of great importance, more especially when used in conjunction with gas-pipes.

From the last insulator to a point below the finish of ceiling, each wire must be separately enclosed in continuous approved flexible tubing, and some suitable method must be adopted to prevent this tubing from becoming detached from the wires. Taping them to the gas-pipe is not approved, as it may be necessary to twist or screw out the gas-pipe at some time; this might seriously injure the wires, or water might lodge between the tubing and the pipe, and lead to trouble.

The use of two outlet boards set on an angle of 90 degrees is regarded as reliable and satisfactory, and its use is advocated, unless an approved device is used which will effectually clamp the flexible tubing in place.

Where gas is used, the flexible tubing must be long enough to reach below the grounded portion of the insulating joint.

Where the surface at any outlet is broken, it must be repaired, so as to leave no holes or open spaces at such outlet.

When it is impracticable to insert the outlet boards described above, as might be the case in knob and tube work installed after plastering or decorating is completed, wooden base-blocks, not less than $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in thickness, securely screwed to lathing, must be provided for switches, and also for fixtures which are not attached to gas-pipes or conduit.

It is suggested that approved outlet boxes be installed at all outlets in concealed knob and tube work, the wires to be protected by approved flexible tubing, extending in continuous lengths from the last porcelain support into the box. In such cases the wires must be protected in the manner described above.

Interior Conduit Work (Rigid and Flexible).

- (a.) No rigid conduit tube having an internal diameter of less than $\frac{5}{8}$ inch must be used. Measurement must be taken inside the conduit.
- (b.) Must be continuous from outlet to outlet or to junction boxes or cabinets, and the conduit must properly enter, and be secured to all fittings, and the entire system must be mechanically secured in position.

In the case of service connections and main runs, this involves running each conduit continuously into a main cut-out cabinet, or gutter surrounding the panel board, as the case may be. (See Fig. 2.)

Where lock-nuts are used to secure conduits to outlet or other boxes, there must be one on each side of the wall of the box which will secure the conduit to the box, unless the bushing is of hard metal and securely screwed to pipe.

- (c.) Except flexible steel conduits of the built-in type, must be first installed as a complete conduit system, without the conductors.

The dimensions of the conduit and the arrangement of the conduit system as a whole must be such that the conductors may be drawn and withdrawn without injury.

- (d.) Must be equipped at every outlet with an approved outlet box or plate.

At exposed ends of conduit (but not at fixture outlets) where wires pass from the conduit system without splice, joint, or tap, an approved fitting having separately bushed holes for each conductor is considered the equivalent of a box.

Outlet plates must not be used where it is practicable to install outlet boxes.

The outlet box or plate must be so installed that it will be flush with the finished surface, and, if this surface be broken, it must be repaired so that no gaps or open spaces will show around the edge of the outlet box or plate.

In buildings already constructed, where the conditions are such that neither outlet box nor plate can be installed, these appliances may be omitted by written permission of the Inspector, provided that the conduit ends are bushed and secured.

It is suggested that outlet boxes and fittings having conductive coatings be used in order to ensure better electrical contact at all points throughout a conduit system.

- (e.) Metal conduits, where they enter junction boxes and at all outlets, etc., must be provided with approved bushings or fastening plates fitted so as to protect wires from abrasion, except when such protection is obtained by the use of approved nipples, properly fitted in boxes or devices.

- (f.) Must have the metal of the conduit permanently and effectually grounded to water-piping, gas-piping, or to a suitable ground-plate. If connections be made to gas-piping they must be on the street side of the meter.

If the conduit system consist of several separate sections, the sections must be bonded to each other and the system grounded; or each section may be separately grounded, as required above.

Where short lengths of conduit (or pipe of equivalent strength) are used for the protection of exposed wiring on side-walls, and such conduit, or pipe, and wiring is installed as required by Rule (e), "General," "Low Potential Work," the conduit or pipe need not be grounded.

Conduit and gas pipes must be securely fastened in outlet boxes, junction boxes, and cabinets, so as to secure good electrical connection.

If conduit, couplings, outlet boxes, junction boxes, cabinets, or fittings, having a protective coating of non-conducting material, such as enamel, be used, the coating must be thoroughly removed from threads of both couplings and conduit and also from surfaces of boxes, cabinets, and fittings where the conduit or ground clamp is secured in order to obtain the requisite good connection.

- (g.) Pull-in and junction boxes must always be installed in such a manner as to be accessible.

- (h.) All elbows or bends must be so made that the conduit or lining of same will not be injured.

The radius of the curve of the inner edge of any elbow must not be less than $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches on rigid circuit, nor less than $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches on flexible conduit or armoring. Conduit must not for draw-in systems have more than the equivalent of four quarter-bends from outlet to outlet.

- (i.) Wires used in conduit must have an approved rubber insulating covering, and must within the conduit tubing be without splices or taps.

Attention is here drawn to the fact that insulation rubber covering for use in unlined conduits must be double-braided.

- (j.) In all sizes larger than No. 12 B. and S. gauge, wires must be stranded.

Exception may be made in straight runs, if without any bends or offsets, where larger solid conductors could evidently be drawn and withdrawn without injury.

- (k.) Conductors must not be drawn in until all mechanical work on a building has been, as far as possible, completed.

Conductors in vertical conduit risers must be supported within the conduit system in accordance with the following table:—

No. 14 to every 100 feet.

No. 00 to 0000 every 80 feet.

No. 0000 to 350,000 c.m. every 60 feet.

350,000 c.m. to 500,000 c.m. every 50 feet.

500,000 c.m. to 750,000 c.m. every 40 feet.

750,000 c.m. every 35 feet.

The following methods of supporting cables are recommended:—

1. A turn of 90 degrees in the conduit system will constitute a satisfactory support.

2. Junction boxes, in which insulating supports of approved type must be installed and secured in a satisfactory manner, may be inserted in the conduit system at the required intervals, so as to withstand the weight of the conductors attached thereto. Such boxes must be provided with proper covers.

3. Cables may be supported, in approved junction boxes, on two or more insulating supports so placed that the conductors will be deflected at an angle of not less than 90 degrees, and carried a distance of not less than twice the diameter of the cable from their vertical position. Cables so suspended may be additionally secured to these insulators by tie wires.

Other methods if used must be approved by the Inspector.

- (l.) Must have the two or more wires of a circuit drawn in the same conduit.

Special permission to deviate from this rule may be given in the case of direct-current circuits if compliance with the rule be impracticable in some particular instance.

- (m.) The same conduit must not contain more than four two-wire or three three-wire circuits of the same system, except by written permission of the Inspector, and must never contain circuits of different systems.

MOULDING WORK.

- (a.) The use of wood moulding is not permitted.

- (b.) For metal moulding, wires must have an approved rubber insulating covering, and must be in continuous lengths from outlet to outlet, or from fitting to fitting, no joints or taps being made in the moulding.

Where joints or taps are necessary, fittings approved for the purpose must be used. Under this rule, wires having a single braiding with a waterproof finish may be employed.

- (c.) Metal mouldings must not be used for circuits carrying more than 1,320 watts.

- (d.) The two or more wires of a circuit must be installed in the same moulding as required for conduit. (See "Conduit," Rule (b).)

- (e.) Must be continuous from outlet to outlet, to junction boxes or to approved fittings designed especially for use with metal mouldings, and must at all outlets be provided with approved terminal fittings which will protect the terminal insulation of conductors from abrasion, unless such protection is afforded by the construction of the boxes or fittings.

- (f.) Where passing through a floor must be carried through an iron pipe extending from the ceiling below to a point 5 feet above the floor.

This will serve as an additional mechanical protection and exclude moisture often prevalent in such locations.

In residences, office buildings, and similar locations, where appearance is an essential feature and where the mechanical strength of the moulding itself is adequate, this ruling may be modified to require the protecting piping from the ceiling below to a point at least 3 inches above the flooring.

- (g.) Backing must be secured in position by screws or bolts, the heads of which must be flush with the metal.
- (h.) Must be grounded and bonded in the same manner as required for conduit.

The general rules under conduit must be observed; that is to say, the metal of the moulding and gas pipes must be securely fastened at outlet boxes, and where metal mouldings, couplings, etc., have protective coatings of non-conducting material, such coatings must be thoroughly removed from the surface of boxes, fittings, etc., at the point where a ground-clamp is secured, and wherever else it may be necessary to make other good bonds or connections.

4. High Potential Work.

(650 to 3,500 Volts.)

- (a.) Open wiring must never be employed unless it can be so located or protected as to be inaccessible to unauthorized persons, and only approved rubber-covered wires may be used.

Must always be in plain sight and never encased, except where required by the Inspector.

- (b.) Where open wiring is permitted, all such rules in Section B as are applicable thereto, such as separation of wires from surface wired over and from each other, supporting, soldering, taping, and general protection, must be observed.

This rule applies with equal force to wires run in conduits or tile ducts. Special care must be taken to prevent abrasion or destruction of the lead sheathing or the insulation on conductors. The grounding of metal conduit pipes must be carried out with the greatest care, as it not only forms a protection from fire, but is very necessary as a protection to life.

- (c.) Except where open work is permitted, wiring should be in the form of multiple conductor, metal-sheathed cable, run in approved unlined metal conduit firmly secured in place.

The metal sheath, as well as the conduit, must be permanently and effectually grounded, and the rest of the conduit installation must conform to the rules for interior conduit, except that at outlets bushings must be used.

The insulation of the several conductors for high potential work where leaving the metal sheath at outlets must be thoroughly protected from moisture and mechanical injury. This may be accomplished by means of a pot-head or some equivalent device.

The conduit must be substantially bonded to the metal casings of all fittings and apparatus connected to the high-tension installation.

It is also permissible to run high potential cables, such as above, underground, or in the floors of fire-proof rooms in tile ducts. Such conductors must be lead-sheathed unless the ducts can be kept permanently dry, in which case rubber insulation, as approved for conduit work, may be employed. Ducts must in all cases be so laid as to be properly drained.

- (d.) All live parts of apparatus must be so placed or protected that they will be inaccessible to unauthorized persons.

With high voltages this rule must be very rigidly observed, and the term "inaccessible" in this instance must be interpreted in a much stricter sense than is required with lower voltages; i.e., that the touching of any live parts even deliberately by unauthorized persons must be rendered difficult; and it must not be possible, even for authorized persons, to touch any live parts accidentally.

So far as is practicable, high potentials must be confined to some particular section of a building to which unauthorized persons have no access; but where this is impossible, all live parts must be completely covered up or otherwise enclosed in such a manner that it will be impossible for any unauthorized person to come into dangerous proximity thereto.

III. WIRING UNDER SPECIAL CONDITIONS.

The rules under this heading must be observed in place of or in addition to (as the case may be) the preceding rules.

1. In Damp Places.

- (a.) In all damp places special attention must be paid to the matter of insulation in order to minimize danger of shock and fire.

As, in damp premises, all walls and other parts of a building are more or less conductive, and the atmosphere is moisture-laden, thereby rendering the electrical apparatus damp, precautions are necessary to ensure effective insulation, because electric shocks, under such circumstances, are of a more serious nature, and leakage is more liable to occur.

It is important that only insulators having a large leakage surface be used, as, owing to the moisture on the insulators, their insulating property is greatly reduced. The use of the ordinary type of split knob is not approved, and only those types in which the supporting screw is entirely surrounded by porcelain throughout the length of the knob, thereby preventing possible contact of the wire with the screw, will be accepted.

In addition to the foregoing, it is also necessary to obviate all possibility of conductors coming into contact with walls, etc., as the effects of chemical action might be serious.

An excellent method of supporting wires in damp places, or where they may be subjected to drip, is to attach their insulators to running boards or wire troughs, these troughs being coated with some form of moisture-proof paint; this not only affords increased mechanical protection to the wires, but protects them very largely from dripping water.

Glass or porcelain tie knobs are also approved, as well as petticoat insulators. The latter, however, must not be fixed in an inverted position.

- (b.) All circuits in damp situations must, where practicable, be so arranged that all pressure can be cut off from a point outside the damp area.

In the case of chill rooms and like places, which are generally closed up and left unattended, the circuits must be so controlled from a point outside.

Defects on installations in damp places are liable to occur more frequently than in dry situations, and it is therefore desirable that those sections of an installation should be arranged to be easily disconnected from the remainder.

- (c.) Wires must have an approved rubber insulating covering unless lead-sheathed conductors be used.

- (d.) Wiring on insulators or knobs and tubes must not be employed in concealed situations.

As, no matter what precautions be taken, the insulation of conductors is liable in damp places to suffer more rapid deterioration than in dry, it is undesirable to install wiring on insulators, etc., in concealed places.

- (e.) Flexible cords must not be used unless served with an outer, braided, water-proof cover.

The insulation must be at least $\frac{3}{64}$ inch thick, and the braided covering must be either thoroughly saturated with a moisture-proof preservative compound, or be enclosed in an outer, braided, moisture-proof preservative covering the whole.

- (f.) Wooden and metal mouldings must not be used.

- (g.) For potentials over 650 volts all insulated conductors must have a lead covering.

As a general rule, higher potentials than 650 volts should not be employed at all in damp premises, but it might be necessary, for example, to carry a conductor of higher potential through a damp section to a place beyond, and it should, in such a case, be lead-covered, as this affords the best protection against moisture.

- (h.) All apparatus, fittings, fixtures, etc., must be of water-proof design, or enclosed in suitable water-proof covers or cabinets.

Local circumstances will indicate the type of enclosure applicable.

- (i.) Only "weather-proof" sockets must be used.

Unless attached to fixtures, they must be hung by separate stranded, rubber-covered wires, not smaller than No. 14 B. and S. gauge, which should preferably be twisted together when the pendant is over 3 feet long.

These wires must be soldered direct to the circuit wires, but supported independently of them.

- (j.) Where the insulation of switches and cut-outs would be seriously affected by moisture, vapour, or dripping water, they must be mounted on porcelain knobs or their equivalent, such as will furnish an air-space of not less than 1 inch between the back of the cut-out or switch and the surface to which it is attached.

- (k.) All live parts of apparatus must be so placed or protected that they cannot be accidentally touched by unauthorized persons.

- (l.) All exposed metal parts or apparatus, fittings, fixtures, etc., which do not carry current, including supports, covers, and the like, must, for all potentials, be permanently and effectually grounded.

Grounding of exposed metal parts which do not carry current is necessary in damp places for all potentials, and not only for those above 300 volts already required under ordinary conditions.

- (m.) Flexible-steel conduits must not be used in damp places unless the conductors contained therein are lead-sheathed, and all junction boxes and other outlet points can be filled or otherwise rendered water-tight.

In laying out wiring installations in damp places, in addition to the foregoing rules, the following points must be observed.

All joints in conductors must be carefully made and thoroughly finished with an approved compound in order to prevent introduction of moisture to the conductors at such points.

Where possible, short weather-proof drop-lights should be used, provided with either porcelain or hard-rubber pigtail sockets.

Rubber rings should be run on all sockets around lamp-bases to prevent the introduction of moisture to the sockets, and the sockets should be provided with suitable lamp guards.

In locating switch and cut-out cabinets, where practicable, they should be placed outside the damp area, such as in an adjoining room or passage-way.

Where conduit work may be permitted in certain sections of damp places, where it is difficult to otherwise protect the wires from mechanical injury, the conduit must be well threaded and leaded, and all lights must be in approved vapour-proof globes of such construction that moisture cannot enter the globes or the points at which they are connected to the conduit system.

All woodwork used in the construction of wire troughs, guard strips, cabinets, or boxing-in for wires must be well painted with moisture-proof paint, to prevent, as far as possible, the absorption of moisture.

While Rule (d) does not permit the use of wires in concealed places on knobs and tubes, it is not intended to prevent the provision of sufficient mechanical protection, e.g., wooden boxing, so long as the wires may be readily got at by the removal of such protection.

2. In premises containing Corrosive Liquids or Vapours.

- (a.) In premises containing corrosive liquids or vapours, special care must be taken to protect all materials used in installations against destructive chemical action.

All apparatus, fittings, fixtures, etc., must either be in themselves capable of resisting corrosive action, or they must be efficiently protected against chemical injury by means of a suitable impregnation or coating, or they must be completely enclosed in vapour-tight, non-corrosive covers.

Bare conductors must either be made of some metal which will not suffer corrosion under the conditions prevalent in any particular case, or they must be galvanized, varnished, or otherwise efficiently protected.

Insulated conductors must either have an insulation which will not corrode, or an extra covering or coating of some suitable material must be provided in addition to the insulation.

Conductors for portable apparatus, and twisted conductors for cord pendants, etc., must be protected by a cover which is both water-tight and non-corrosive.

No hard-and-fast rules can be laid down as to what are the most suitable materials to employ in any premises where corrosive liquids or vapours are present, the requirements depending on the particular circumstances of each case.

Copper and lead are both readily attacked by nitric acid, although hydrochloric and sulphuric acids have but little effect upon them. Aluminium is practically unaffected by nitric acid, while hydrochloric acid has some corrosive action upon it. Zinc, unless quite pure, is readily attacked by sulphuric and hydrochloric acids. These examples will serve to show that it would be impossible to formulate general rules which would cover all conditions.

In some cases it may be necessary to take due precautions in the choice of materials employed for supporting any electrical apparatus, wires, etc.

For example, iron screws might be subject to a very rapid corrosion, thus rendering them unreliable as a means of support, whereas brass screws, under the same conditions, might be quite satisfactory.

- (b.) The question of insulation must be also given very careful consideration, as, where corrosive liquids and vapours are present, leakage is likely to take place to a greater extent even than in ordinary damp places.

Wires must be supported on insulators, which will provide a separation from the surface wired over of at least 1½ inches; this distance may be required to be increased considerably, especially where the potential exceeds 300 volts. In all instances petticoat insulators would be preferable to those of any other form.

Increased spacing is desirable between conductors and between all live parts at different potentials and may be essential, in order to reduce leakage to a reasonable degree.

- (c.) Potentials exceeding 650 volts must not be employed for either power or lighting.

In the premises to which these rules refer, even with the greatest precautions, corrosion is liable to occur, thus greatly increasing the risk of shock and fire, especially with high voltages.

- (d.) Wooden or metal mouldings must not be employed.

3. In Premises containing Explosive Materials.

- (a.) In premises containing explosive material all sparking or arcing must be entirely obviated or must be so isolated that risk of explosion from this cause will be reduced to a minimum.

The rules under this section refer chiefly to such materials as give off explosive vapours, such as gasoline, etc., in the presence of which it is evident that any sparking or arcing which might occur would be highly dangerous. As such gases find their way into the inside even of so-called gas-tight cases, no apparatus in the operation of which sparking or arcing is liable to occur must be placed in premises where such gases are present, as an explosion might take place inside, destroying the case and igniting the gas outside. Such gas-tight cases may, however, be employed in premises where only such materials as coal or flour dust, etc., are present in the atmosphere.

- (b.) Except as provided for under Rule (g), "Installations in Damp Places," potentials exceeding 300 volts must not be employed.

- (c.) Only armoured cable or steel conduit systems may be employed.

Open wiring, either bare or insulated, is easily damaged, and therefore unsuitable. Bare conductors are manifestly inadmissible in such premises, as also is metal moulding, as this latter cannot be made gas-tight; if, on account of any defects, sparking should occur, a serious explosion might take place. Where conduit wiring is used, only those forms of vapour-proof globes must be used which become part of the conduit system, and together with the conduit system must be entirely gas tight throughout.

If the draw-in system of conduit be used, it must be what is known as "rigid metal." If it is desired to use flexible steel conduit, it must not be of the draw-in type, but of the style known to the trade as "B.X. Cable," being a multiple conductor contained in an impregnated braiding, the whole being closely wound with steel armouring.

The same precautions in attaching such cables to fittings must be observed as are called for in the foregoing requirements for rigid conduit; that is to say, effective means must be adopted to prevent the entry of fumes or gases at junction or outlet points.

- (d.) All commutating and slip-ring motors must be totally enclosed if highly explosive vapours be present.

Short-circuited rotor motors need not be so enclosed.

Asynchronous motors, with wound rotors, need only have the slip-rings enclosed.

- (e.) Motor-starting devices, with movable contacts, must be enclosed in gas-tight cases.

- (f.) Resistances must be either placed outside the danger zone or enclosed in gas-tight cases thoroughly ventilated to the outside air.

- (g.) Only incandescent lamps must be used. Arc, Norst, or similar lamps must not be employed.

4. In Theatres and Moving-picture Establishments.

- (a.) Electrical apparatus and equipment, situated in any part to which the public is admitted, must only be accessible to authorized persons.

To attain this object, all apparatus, etc., must be protected by a cover, or placed in a cabinet, and so locked or secured that it cannot be touched or operated by unauthorized persons; or it must be remote from access.

- (b.) Where supply may be obtained from two separate street mains, two separate and distinct services must be installed, one service to be of sufficient capacity to supply current for the entire equipment of the theatre, while the other service must be of sufficient capacity to supply current for all emergency lights. Where supply cannot be obtained from two separate sources, the feed for emergency lights must be taken from a point on the street side of the main service fuses. By "emergency lights" is meant exit lights and all lights in lobbies, stairways, corridors, and all portions of a theatre to which the public has access, which are normally kept lighted during the performance.

Where the source of supply is an isolated plant within the same building, an auxiliary service, of at least sufficient capacity to supply all emergency lights, must be obtained from some outside source; or a suitable storage battery within the premises will be considered the equivalent of such service.

- (c.) All lamps and luminous radiators on the stage side of the curtain, including those used in dressing-rooms, must be protected by suitable guards.

Stage.

- (d.) All permanent wiring on the stage side of the proscenium wall, including that in dressing-rooms, except as hereinafter provided, must be in approved conduit, or armoured cable must be used.

Switchboards.

- (e.) Where accessible from the stage level, must be protected by a suitable guard-rail to prevent accidental contact with live parts on the board.

Foot-lights.

- (f.) Must be wired in approved conduit, or armoured cable must be used; each lamp receptacle must be enclosed within an approved outlet box, or the lamp receptacles may be mounted in an iron or steel box. The metal used for such boxes must be of a thickness not less than No. 20 U.S. sheet-metal gauge; it must be treated to prevent oxidation and the boxes must be so constructed as to enclose all the wires. Wires must be soldered to the lugs of receptacles.

Must be so wired that no set of lamps requiring more than 1,320 watts nor more than 24 receptacles shall dependant upon one cut-out.

Borders and Proscenium Side-lights.

- (g.) 1. Must be constructed of steel of a thickness not less than No. 20 U.S. sheet-metal gauge, treated to prevent oxidation, suitably stayed and supported and so designed that the flanges of reflectors will protect the lamps.

3. Must be wired in approved conduit, or armoured cable must be used; each lamp receptacle must be enclosed within an approved outlet box, or the lamp receptacles may be mounted in an iron or steel box, the metal of which must be of a thickness not less than No. 20 U.S. sheet-metal gauge and treated to prevent oxidation. Such boxes must be so constructed as to enclose all wires, which latter must be soldered to the lugs of receptacles.

4. Must be provided with suitable guards to prevent scenery or other combustible material from coming in contact with the lamps.

5. Cables for borders must be of approved type and suitably supported; conduit construction must be used from the switchboard to the point where cables must be flexible to permit of the raising and lowering of the borders.

6. For the wiring of the border proper, wire having approved slow-burning insulation must be used.

7. Borders must be suitably suspended, and if a wire rope be used, at least one strain insulator must be inserted at the border.

Stage and Gallery Pockets.

- (h.) Must be of approved type, controlled from the switchboard; each receptacle must be of not less than 35-ampere rating for arc lamps nor 15-ampere for incandescent lamps, and be wired for its full rating. Arc pockets must be wired with conductors not smaller than No. 6 B. and S. gauge, and incandescent pockets with not less than those of No. 12 B. and S. gauge.

Plugs for arc and incandescent pockets must not be interchangeable.

Scene Docks.

- (i.) If lamps be placed in scene docks, they must be so located and installed that they will not be liable to suffer mechanical injury.

Curtain Motors.

- (j.) Must be of iron-clad type.

Control of Stage Flues.

- (k.) In cases where dampers are released by an electric device, the electric circuit operating it must be normally closed.

The magnet operating the damper must be wound to take full voltage of the circuit to which it is connected, using no resistance device, and must not heat more than the normal for apparatus of similar construction; it must be located in the loft above the scenery and be installed in a suitable iron box with a tight self-closing door.

Such dampers must be controlled by at least two standard single-pole switches mounted within approved iron boxes provided with self-closing doors, without lock or latch, and located, one at the electrician's station, and others as designated by the Inspector.

Dressing-rooms.

(l.) All pendant lights must be equipped with approved reinforced cord, armoured cable, or steel armoured flexible cord.

Portable Equipment.

(m.) Arc lamps used for stage effects must conform to the following requirements:—

1. Must be constructed entirely of metal, except where the use of insulating material is necessary.
2. Must be substantially constructed, and so designed as to provide for proper ventilation and prevent sparks from being emitted from the lamps when they are in operation; mica must be used for frame insulation.
3. The front opening must be provided with a self-closing hinged door-frame, in which wire gauze or glass must be inserted, except in the case of lens lamps, where the front may be stationary, and a solid door must be provided on the back or side.
4. Must be so constructed that neither carbons nor live parts will be brought into contact with the metal of the hood during operation, and arc lamps, frames, and standards must be so installed and protected as to prevent them from becoming grounded.
5. The switch on the standard must be so constructed that accidental contact with any live portion thereof will be impossible.
6. All standard connections in the lamp and at the switch and rheostat must be provided with approved lugs.
7. Rheostats must be plainly marked with their rating in volts and amperes, and, if mounted on the standard, must be raised to a height of at least 3 inches above the floor. Resistances must be enclosed in a substantial and properly ventilated metal case affording a clearance of at least 1 inch between the case and the resistance element.
8. A competent operator must be in charge of each arc lamp, except that one operator may have charge of two lamps when they are not more than 10 feet apart, and are so located that he can properly watch and care for both lamps.

Bunches.

(n.) Must be substantially constructed of metal and must not contain any exposed wiring.

The cable feeding them must be bushed in an approved manner where passing through the metal, and must be properly secured to prevent any mechanical strain from coming on the connection.

Strips.

(o.) Must be constructed of steel of a thickness not less than No. 20 U.S. sheet-metal gauge, treated to prevent oxidation, suitably stayed and supported, and so designed that the flanges will protect the lamps.

Cable must be bushed in a suitable manner where passing through metal, and must be properly secured to prevent undue mechanical strain from coming on the connections.

Must be wired in approved conduit, or armoured cable must be used. Each lamp receptacle must be enclosed within an approved outlet box, or the lamp receptacles may be mounted in an iron or steel box, the metal of which must be of a thickness not less than No. 20 U.S. sheet-metal gauge and treated to prevent oxidation. Such boxes must be so constructed as to enclose all wires, which latter must be soldered to the lugs of receptacles.

Portable Plugging Boxes.

(p.) Must be constructed as that no current-carrying part will be exposed, and each receptacle must be protected by approved fuses, mounted on slate or marble bases and enclosed in a fire-proof cabinet equipped with self-closing doors. Each receptacle must be constructed to carry 30 amperes without undue heating, the bus-bars must have a carrying capacity equivalent to the current required for the total number of receptacles, and approved lugs must be provided for the connection of the master cable.

Pin Plug Connectors.

(q.) Must be of an approved type, so installed that the "female" part of the plug will be on the live end of the cable, and must be so constructed that tension on the cable will not cause undue mechanical strain on the connection.

Portable Conductors.

(r.) Flexible conductors run from receptacles to arc lamps, bunches, or other portable equipments must be approved stage cable; except that for the purpose of feeding a stand lamp under conditions where conductors are not liable to suffer severe mechanical injury, an approved reinforced cord may be used, provided that the fuse in the cut-out employed to protect the lamp is not rated for more than 6 amperes.

Lights on Scenery.

(s.) Where brackets are used they must be wired entirely on the inside, the fixture stem must come through to the back of the scenery and the end of the stem must be properly bushed.

String or Festooned Lights.

(t.) Wiring of these must be of an approved method; joints must be properly made, soldered, and taped, and staggered where practicable.

Where lamps are used in lanterns or similar devices, approved guards must be employed.

Special Electrical Effects.

(u.) Where devices are used for producing special effects, such as lightning, waterfalls, etc., the apparatus must be so constructed and located that flames, sparks, etc., resulting from its operation cannot come in contact with combustible material.

To obtain special effects, potentials exceeding 300 volts are sometimes necessary, and where employed must be under the direct charge of a trained attendant while pressure is on, and all temporary conductors, apparatus, etc., used in connection therewith must be removed as soon as they are done with.

Auditorium.

(v.) All wiring must be installed in approved conduit or metal mouldings, or armoured cable must be used.

Exit lights must not have more than one set of fuses between them and the service fuses.

Exit lights and all lights in halls, corridors, or any other part of the building used by an audience, except the general auditorium lighting, must be fed independently of the stage lighting and must be controlled only from the lobby or other convenient place in front of the house. All fuses must be enclosed in approved cabinets.

Moving-picture Equipments.

(w.) 1. Arc lamps used as a part of a moving-picture machine: Must be constructed, so far as is practicable, similarly to arc lamps of theatres, and conductors must have a current-carrying capacity not less than that of No. 6 B. and S. gauge copper wire.

2. Rheostats: Must conform to rheostat requirements for theatre arcs, and must be kept outside of the cabinet.

3. Top and Bottom Reels: Must be enclosed in steel boxes or magazines, each with an approved opening, either at the bottom or the top, so arranged as not to permit the entrance of flame to the magazine. No solder is to be used in the construction of these magazines. The front side of each magazine must consist of a spring-hinged door, swinging horizontally, and provided with a substantial latch.

4. Automatic Shutter: Must be provided and be so constructed as to shield the film from the beam of light whenever the film is not running at operating speed. The shutter must be permanently attached to the gate-frame.

5. Extra Films: Must be kept in individual metal boxes equipped with tight-fitting covers.

6. Machine Operation: If practicable, must be operated by hand.

The only exception, so far, to the observance of this rule, for which permission is granted is the "kinemacolor machine," which is specially designed for motor drive, as hand operation is not practicable.

Machine Enclosure.

7. The machine must be placed in an enclosure or house made of suitable fire-proof material; it must be properly ventilated, properly lighted, and large enough for the operator to walk freely on either side of or at the back of the machine. All openings into this booth must be so arranged as to be entirely closed by doors or shutters constructed of the same, or equally good, fire-resisting materials as the booth itself. Doors or covers must be arranged so as to be held normally closed by spring hinges or equivalent devices.

Cut-outs and switches, if placed inside the cabinet, must be so located or of such design that the danger of communicating fire will be, as far as possible, eliminated.

8. Reels containing Films under Examination or in Process of Rewinding: Must be enclosed in magazines or approved metal boxes similar to those required for films in operation, and not more than 2 feet of film must be exposed in the booth.

(x.) "Moving-picture" machines with inflammable films must not be operated in any premises except those in which the installation complies with the foregoing.

This rule will not prevent the use of moving-picture machines with inflammable films in places other than those classed as "theatres," provided that written permission be obtained from the Inspector. Such permission will only be granted when every reasonable safeguard has been observed, and in no case unless the machine be enclosed in a cabinet which, in effect, complies with all the foregoing requirements.

5. Outline and Sign Lighting.

(a.) Must be connected only to low potential systems.

(b.) Open or conduit work may be used, but moulding will not be permitted.

(c.) All wires must be double-braided, rubber-covered, and if open wiring be employed, a minimum distance of 1 inch from the surface wired over must be maintained.

(d.) Where flexible tubing is required, it must be kept at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from the surface wired over and the ends must be sealed and painted with moisture repellant.

(e.) Where armoured cable is used, the conductors must be protected from moisture by a lead sheath between the armour and the insulation.

(f.) Cut-outs, switches, time-switches, flashers, and similar appliances, if located inside the building, must comply with the rules governing such devices; if located outside the building, they must be enclosed in a steel or cast-iron water-tight box. If a steel box be used, the minimum thickness of the steel must be 0.125 of an inch (No. 11 U.S. sheet-metal gauge). Boxes must be so constructed that when the switch operates the blade will clear the door by at least 1 inch.

(g.) Every circuit for outline or sign lighting must be distinct from all other circuits in an installation.

As the working conditions of sign and outline lighting are different from those of ordinary lighting installations, these two classes of lighting should be kept quite distinct.

All such circuits should branch off from the main distribution board, or, in the case of large installations, they may be taken from the nearest sub-distribution board, provided that the cables leading thereto are of ample size. In no case should such circuits be utilized to supply minor sub-circuits (for example, two or three lamps) for use inside the building. There would be no objection, however, to having two or three signs supplied with current from the same mains. Having regard to the situation of any outline or sign lighting (i.e., whether inside or outside buildings), such rules as are applicable must be complied with.

It is obvious that sign lights must not be so placed as to admit the possibility of overhead conductors, such as feeders, trolley-wires, etc., coming into contact with them. Additional insulation over the conductors, such as porcelain tubes or other devices, will not be allowed as an alternative.

(h.) Circuits must be so arranged that not more than 1,320 watts will be finally dependent upon a single cut-out, nor must more than 66 sockets or receptacles be connected to a single circuit.

In any circuit having a common return for several sets of lamps, such return must be of sufficient size, in accordance with Table A, "Conductors," to carry the current for the maximum number of lamps which it is possible to have on at one time.

(i.) Sockets and receptacles must be of the keyless porcelain type and wires must be soldered to their lugs.

(j.) Signs must be constructed entirely of metal or other approved incombustible material, except that wood may be used on the outside as decoration if kept at least 2 inches from lamp receptacles.

Sheet metal must not be less than No. 28 U.S. sheet-metal gauge.

All metal must be galvanized, enamelled, or treated with at least three coats of anti-corrosive paint, or otherwise protected in an approved manner against corrosion.

Signs must be so constructed as to secure ample strength and rigidity and must be practically weather-proof. They must also have the maker's name or trade-mark permanently attached to the exterior. All terminals and wiring other than the supply leads must be enclosed, except that open work will be permitted for signs on roofs or open ground where not subject to mechanical injury, provided that the wiring is in accordance with Section B.

Cut-outs, transformers unless of weather-proof type, flashers, and other similar devices on or within the sign structure must be in a separate, completely enclosed accessible and weather-proof compartment, or in a substantial metal weather-proof box or cabinet, the thickness of the walls of which must not be less than that of the metal of the sign itself.

Every compartment must have suitable provision for drainage through one or more holes, each not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in diameter.

Receptacles must be so designed as to afford permanent and reliable means to prevent possible turning, and the terminals must be at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from other terminals and from the metal of the sign, except that where open work is permitted this separation must be 1 inch. Miniature receptacles will not be approved for use in outdoor signs.

In those parts of circuits where wires are connected to approved receptacles which hold them at least 1 inch from the surface wired over, and which are placed not over 1 foot apart, such receptacles will be considered to afford the necessary support and spacing for the wires. Between receptacles more than 1 foot apart, but less than 2 feet apart, an additional incombustible, non-absorptive insulator, maintaining a separation and spacing equivalent to that provided by the receptacles, must be used.

Leads from signs must either pass through the walls of signs in approved metal conduit, or armoured cable must be used; the leads must be neatly cabled and pass through one or more approved incombustible, non-absorptive bushings.

6. Temporary Work.

(a.) Under this heading the rules for permanent work need only be so far observed as to effectually guard against shock and fire.

Permits may therefore be granted for the use of tem-work for a stated period, at the expiration of which it must be removed or disconnected, unless circumstances require an extension of time; this may be granted if, in the opinion of the Inspector, it be warranted.

SECTION C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

I. LIGHTING AND POWER FROM RAILWAY WIRES.

Will not be permitted in the same circuit with trolley-wires with a ground return, except in electric railway-cars, electric car-houses, power-houses, passenger and freight stations connected with the operation of electric railways.

II. SERIES LAMPS.

- (a.) No multiple-series or series-multiple system of lighting will be approved.
- (b.) Series lamps must not, under any circumstances, be attached to gas fixtures.

III. CONSTANT-CURRENT SYSTEMS.

As series are lighting systems are seldom used for inside illumination at the present day, and those already installed are being gradually replaced by multiple systems, it is not deemed advisable or necessary to draft special rules governing this class of work. If, however, circumstances should warrant it, and no other system be available, the Inspector may grant special permission for the use of such a system inside a building, provided that the wiring and apparatus be installed in such a way that danger to life or property is, as far as practicable, eliminated.

The greatest field for a constant-current system is street lighting; the disadvantages of such a system for inside use are due to the fact that, generally, extra high voltages are used with an increased risk of breakdown of insulation, resulting in danger to persons and risk of fire, and also to the fact that an interruption of current causes loss of light over a considerable area.

IV. ELECTRIC GAS LIGHTING.

Electric gas lighting, unless it be the frictional system, must not be used on the same fixtures with electric light.

V. SIGNALLING SYSTEMS.

Governing wiring for telephone, telegraph (except wireless telegraph apparatus), district messenger, and call-bell circuits, fire and burglar alarms, and all similar systems which are hazardous only because of their liability to become crossed with electric light, heat, or power circuits.

- (a.) Outside wires must be run in underground ducts or strung on poles, and kept off the roofs of buildings, except by special permission of the Inspector, and must not be placed on the same cross-arm with electric light or power wires. They must not occupy the same duct, man-hole, hand-hole of conduit systems with electric light or power wires.

Single man-holes, or hand-holes separated into sections by means of partitions of brick or tile, will be considered as conforming with the above rule.

The liability of accidental crossing of overhead signalling circuits with electric light and power circuits may be guarded against to a considerable extent by endeavouring to keep the two classes of circuits on different sides of the same street.

When the entire circuit from central station to building is run in underground conduits, Rules (b) to (m), inclusive, do not apply.

- (b.) When outside wires are run on the same pole with electric light or power wires, the distance between the two outside pins of each cross-arm must not be less than 24 inches.

Signalling wires, being smaller and more liable to break and fall, should be generally placed on the lower cross-arms.

When the wires are carried in approved cables, the next three Rules (c, d, and e) do not apply.

- (c.) Where wires are attached to the outside walls of buildings they must have an approved rubber insulating covering, and on frame buildings or frame portions of other buildings must be supported on glass or porcelain insulators or knobs.

- (d.) The wires from the last outside support to the cut-outs or protectors must be of copper and must have an approved rubber insulation; drip-loops must be formed immediately outside the building at the point of entrance of the wires.

- (e.) Wires must enter buildings through approved incombustible, non-absorptive insulating bushings sloping upward from the outside.

Installations where the current-carrying parts of the apparatus installed are capable of carrying indefinitely a current of 10 amperes.

- (f.) An all-metallic circuit must be provided, except in telegraph systems.

- (g.) At the entrance of wires to buildings, approved single-pole cut-outs, designed for 251-600 volts potential and containing fuses rated at not over 10 amperes capacity, must be provided for each wire. These cut-outs must not be placed in the immediate vicinity of easily ignitable stuff, or where exposed to inflammable gases or dust, or to flyings of combustible material.

- (h.) The wires inside a building must be of copper not less than No. 16 B. and S. gauge, and must have the same insulation and be supported in the same manner as would be required for an installation of electric light or power wiring for 10-650 volts potential.

- (i.) The instruments must be mounted on bases constructed of incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material. Holes for the supporting screws must be so located or countersunk that there will be at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch space, measured over the surface, between the head of the screw and the nearest live metal part. Installations where the current-carrying parts of the apparatus installed are not capable of carrying indefinitely a current of 10 amperes.

- (j.) Must be provided with an approved protective device located as near as possible to the entrance of wires to building. The protector must not be placed in the immediate vicinity of easily ignitable stuff, or where exposed to inflammable gases or dust, or flyings of combustible materials.

- (k.) Wires from entrance to building, to the protector, must be so supported on porcelain insulators that they will come in contact with nothing except their proper supports.

- (l.) The ground-wire of the protective device must be run in accordance with the following requirements:—

1. Must be of copper and not smaller than No. 18 B. and S. gauge.

2. Must have an insulating covering approved for voltages from 0 to 600, except that the preservative compound may be omitted.

3. Must run in as straight a line as possible to a good permanent ground. This may be obtained by connection to a water or gas pipe connected to the street mains or to a ground rod or pipe driven in permanently damp earth. When connections are made to pipes, preference must be given to water-pipes. If attachment be made to a gas-pipe, the connection in all cases must be made between the meter and the street main and must be made as near as possible to the earth.

When the ground-wire is to be attached to a water or gas pipe, it may be connected by means of an approved ground-clamp fastened to a thoroughly clean portion of the pipe; or the pipe must be thoroughly cleaned and tinned with rosin flux solder, the ground-wire being then wrapped tightly around the pipe and properly soldered to it.

If the ground-wire be attached to a ground-rod driven into the ground, it must be soldered to the rod in a similar manner.

Steam or hot-water pipes must not be used for a protector ground.

- (m.) The protector, to be approved, must comply with the following requirements:—

For Instrument Circuits of Telegraph Systems.

1. An approved single-pole cut-out in each wire designed for 2,000 volts potential, and containing fuses rated at not over 1 ampere. When main line cut-outs are installed as called for in Rule (g), the instrument cut-outs may be placed between the switchboard and the instrument, as near the switchboard as possible.

For all other Systems.

1. Must be mounted on incombustible, non-absorptive insulating bases, so designed that when the protector is in place all parts which may be alive will be thoroughly insulated from the wall to which the protector is attached.

2. Must have the following parts:—

A Lightning-arrester, which will operate with a difference of potential between wires of not over 500 volts, and so arranged that the chance of accidental grounding is reduced to a minimum.

A Fuse, designed to open the circuit in case the wires become crossed with light or power circuits. The fuse must be able to open the circuit, without arcing or serious flashing when crossed with any ordinary commercial light or power circuit.

A Heat Coil, if the sensitiveness of the instrument demand it, which will operate before a sneak current can damage the instrument which the protector is guarding.

Heat coils are necessary in all circuits normally closed through magnet windings which cannot indefinitely carry a current of at least 5 amperes.

The heat coil is designed to warm up and melt out with a current large enough to endanger the instrument if continued for a long time, but so small that it would not blow the fuses ordinarily found necessary for such instruments. The smaller currents are often called "sneak" currents.

3. The fuses must be so placed as to protect the arrester and heat coils, and the protector terminals must be plainly marked "line," "instrument," "ground."

An easily read abbreviation of the above words will be allowed.

The following rules apply to all systems whether the wires from the central office to the building are overhead or underground:—

(n.) Wires beyond the protector, or wires inside buildings where no protector is used, must be neatly arranged and securely fastened in place in some convenient, workmanlike manner.

They must not come nearer than 2 inches to any electric light or power wire in the building, unless separated therefrom by some continuous and firmly fixed non-conductor creating a permanent separation; this non-conductor to be in addition to the regular insulation on the wire.

The wires would ordinarily be insulated, but the kind of insulation is not specified, as the protector is relied upon to stop all dangerous currents. Porcelain tubing or approved flexible tubing may be used for encasing wires where required as above.

(o.) Wires, where bunched together in a vertical run within any building, must have a fire-resisting covering sufficient to prevent the wires from carrying fire from floor to floor, unless they are run either in incombustible tubing or in a fire-proof shaft, which shaft must be provided with fire-stops at each floor.

Signalling wires and electric light or power wires may be run in the same shaft, provided either that one of these classes of wires is run in incombustible tubing, or that when run otherwise the two classes of wires be separated from each other by at least 2 inches.

In no case must signalling wires be run in the same tube with electric light or power wires.

(p.) Transformers or other devices for supplying current to signalling systems from light, heat, or power circuits must be of a design expressly approved for this purpose. The primary wiring must be installed in accordance with all such rules in Section B as are applicable.

VI. WIRELESS TELEGRAPH APPARATUS.

Note.—These rules do not apply to wireless telegraph apparatus installed on shipboard.

In setting up wireless telegraph apparatus (so called) all wiring within the building must conform to the rules in Section B for the class of work installed, and to the following additional specifications:—

(a.) Aerial conductors must be permanently and effectually grounded, at all times when the station is not in operation, by a copper conductor not smaller than No. 4 B. and S. gauge, run in as direct a line as possible, and connected to a water-pipe at a point on the street side of all connections to the said water-pipe within the premises, or to some other equally satisfactory earth connection.

(b.) Aerial conductors, when grounded as above specified, must be effectually cut off from all apparatus within the building.

(c.) Or the aerial conductors must be permanently connected at all times to earth in the manner specified above, through a short-gap lightning-arrester. The arrester must have a gap of not over 0.015 inch between brass or copper plates not less than $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in length parallel to the gap and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches the other way, with a thickness of not less than $\frac{1}{8}$ inch; it must be mounted upon incombustible, non-absorptive insulating material of such dimensions as to give ample strength. Other approved arresters of equally low resistance and equally substantial construction may be used.

(d.) In cases where the aerial is grounded as specified in Rule (a) the switch employed to connect it to ground must not be smaller than a standard 100-ampere knife switch.

(e.) Where supply is obtained direct from a street service, the circuit must be installed in approved metal conduit, or armoured cable must be used. In order to protect the supply system from high potential surges, there must be connected in circuit either a transformer having such a ratio that the potential on the secondary leads will not exceed 550 volts, or two condensers in series must be connected across the line. The capacity of the condensers must not be less than one-half microfarad, and the connection between them must be permanently and effectually grounded.

1. CAR WIRING AND EQUIPMENT OF CARS.

(a.) Protection of Car-body, etc.

1. The under-side of the car-bodies must be protected by approved fire-resisting insulating material not less than $\frac{1}{8}$ inch in thickness, or by sheet iron or steel not less than 0.04 inch in thickness, as specified in the following paragraphs, Nos. 2, 3, and 4. This protection must be provided over all electrical apparatus, such as motors with a rating of over 75 horse-power each, resistances, contactors, lightning-arresters, air-brake motors, etc., and also where wires are run, except that protection may be omitted over wires designed to carry 25 amperes or less if they are encased in metal conduit.

2. Over motors of more than 75 horse-power each, fire-resisting material or sheet iron or steel must extend not less than 8 inches beyond all edges of openings in the motors, and not less than 6 inches beyond motor leads on all sides.

3. Over resistances, contactors, and lightning-arresters, and other electrical apparatus, excepting when amply protected by their casing, fire-resisting material or sheet iron or steel must extend not less than 8 inches beyond all edges of the devices.

4. Over conductors not encased in conduit, and conductors in conduit when designed to carry over 25 amperes, unless the conduit is so supported as to give not less than $\frac{1}{2}$ inch clear space between the conduit and the car, fire-resisting material or sheet iron or steel must extend at least 6 inches beyond conductors on either side.

The fire-resisting insulating material or sheet iron or steel may be omitted over cables made up of flame-proof braided outer covering when surrounded by $\frac{1}{8}$ inch flame-proof covering, as called for by Rule (i), paragraph 4.

5. In all cases fire-proof material or sheet iron or steel must have joints well fitted, be securely fastened to the sills, floor timbers, and cross-braces, and have the whole surface treated with a water-proof paint.

6. Cut-out and switch cabinets must be substantially made of metal.

(b.) Wires, Cables, etc.

1. All conductors must be stranded, the allowable current-carrying capacity being determined by Table A, "Conductors," except that motor, trolley, and resistance leads shall in no case have a current-carrying capacity less than that of No. 7 B. and S. gauge copper wire, heater circuits not less than that of No. 12 B. and S. gauge copper wire, and lightning and other auxiliary circuits not less than that of No. 14 B. and S. gauge copper wire.

The current used in determining the size of motor, trolley, and resistance leads shall be the per cent. of the full load and current, based on one hour's run of the motor, as given by the following table:—

Size each Motor.	Motor Leads.	Trolley Leads.	Resistance Leads.
75 h.p. or less.....	50%	40%	15%
Over 75 h.p.....	45%	35%	15

Fixture wire will be permitted for wiring approved clusters.

2. Must have an insulation and braid approved for use for the potential employed.

3. When run in metal conduit, must be protected by an additional braid.

Where conductors are laid in conduit, not being drawn through the additional braid will not be required.

4. When not in conduit, in metal moulding, or in cables, surrounded by $\frac{1}{8}$ inch flame-proof covering, must be approved rubber-covered (except that tape may be substituted for braid), and be protected by an additional flame-proof braid, at least $\frac{1}{32}$ inch in thickness; the outside must be saturated with a preservative flame-proof compound, except that when motors are so enclosed that flame cannot extend outside of the casing, the flame-proof covering will not be required on the motor leads.

5. Must be so spliced or joined as to be both mechanically and electrically secure without solder. The joints must be soldered and covered with an insulation equal to that on the conductors.

Joints made with approved splicing devices and those connecting the leads at motors, ploughs, or third-rail shoes need not be soldered.

6. All connections of cables to cut-outs, switches, and fittings, except those to controller connection boards, when designed to carry over 25 amperes, must be provided with lugs or terminals soldered to the cable, and securely fastened to the device by bolts, screws, or by clamping; or the end of the cable, after the insulation is removed, must be dipped in solder and be fastened into the device by at least two set-screws having check-nuts.

All connections for conductors to fittings, etc., designed to carry less than 25 amperes must be provided with upturned lugs that will grip the conductor between the screw and the lug, the screws being provided with flat washers; or by block terminals having two set-screws, and the ends of the conductors must be dipped in solder.

Soldering, in addition to the connection of the binding screws, is strongly recommended, and will be insisted on when the above requirements are not complied with.

This rule is only to apply to circuits where the maximum potential is over 25 volts and the current exceeds 5 amperes.

(c.) Cut-outs, Circuit-breakers, etc.

1. All cut-outs and switches having exposed live metal parts must be located in metal cabinets. Cut-outs and switches, not in iron boxes or in cabinets, must be mounted on fire-resisting insulating material of not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in thickness, which must project at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch beyond all sides of the cut-out or switch.

2. Cut-outs must be of the approved cartridge or approved blow-out type.

3. All switches controlling circuits of over 5-ampere rating must be of approved single-pole, quick-break, or approved magnetic blow-out type.

Switches controlling circuits carrying 5 amperes or less may be of the approved single-pole, double-break, snap type.

4. Circuit-breakers must be of approved type.

5. Circuits must not be fused above their safe current-carrying capacity.

6. A cut-out must be placed as near as possible to the current-collector, so that the blowing of the fuse in this cut-out will cut off all current from the car.

When cars are operated by metallic return circuits, with circuit-breakers connected to both sides of the circuit, no fuses in addition to the circuit-breakers will be required.

When, from the nature of the case, or on account of the size of the conductors, the ordinary pipe and junction box constructions is not permissible, a special form of conduit system may be used, provided that the general requirements as given below are complied with.

1. Metal conduits and outlets and junction boxes must be constructed in accordance with standard requirements, except that the conduit for lighting circuits need not be over $\frac{5}{16}$ inch internal diameter and $\frac{1}{2}$ inch external diameter, and for heating and air-motor circuits need not be over $\frac{3}{8}$ inch internal diameter and $\frac{9}{16}$ inch external diameter, and all conduits where exposed to dampness must be watertight.

2. Must be continuous between, and be firmly secured into, all outlet or junction boxes and fittings, making a thorough mechanical and electrical connection between same.

3. Metal conduits, where they enter all outlet or junction boxes and fittings, must be provided with approved bushings fitted so as to protect cables from abrasion.

4. Except as noted in Rule (i), paragraph 2, must have the metal of the conduit permanently and effectually grounded.

5. Junction and outlet boxes must be installed in such a manner as to be accessible.

6. All conduits, outlets, or junction boxes and fittings must be firmly and substantially fastened to the framework of the car.

1. Only approved metal moulding may be used, except as specified in Rule (i), paragraph 2. (See Rules on "Moulding Work," Section B.)

2. When constructed of fire-resisting insulating material, as permitted in Rule (i), paragraph 2, the backing must not be less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in thickness and be of a width sufficient to extend not less than 1 inch beyond the conductors at the sides.

The capping, which must be not less than $\frac{1}{8}$ inch in thickness, must cover and extend at least $\frac{3}{4}$ inch beyond conductors at either side.

The joints in the moulding shall be mirted to fit close, the whole material being firmly secured in place by screws or nails, and treated on the inside and outside with a water-proof paint.

When fire-resisting moulding is used over surfaces already protected by $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch fire-resisting insulating material, no backing will be required.

(f.) Lighting and Lighting Circuits.

1. Each outlet must be provided with an approved receptacle or an approved cluster. No lamp consuming more than 128 watts must be used.

2. Circuits must be run in approved metal conduit or approved metal moulding.

3. When metal conduit is used, except for sign lights, all outlets must be provided with approved outlet boxes.

4. At outlet boxes, except where approved clusters are used, receptacles must be fastened to the inside of the box, and the metal cover must have an insulating bushing around the opening for the lamp.

5. The exposed metal parts of all electrical fittings and fixtures which do not carry current (except covers which are lined, such as those of sockets, snap switches, receptacles, etc.) must be permanently and effectually grounded.

(g.) Heaters and Heating Circuits.

1. Panel heaters must be so constructed and located that when heaters are in place all current-carrying parts will be at least 4 inches from all woodwork.

Heaters for cross-seats must be so located that current-carrying parts will be at least 6 inches below the under-side of the seats, unless the under-side of the seat is protected by fire-resisting insulating material of not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thickness, or by 0.04 inch sheet metal with 1 inch air-space over it, when the distance may be reduced to 3 inches.

Truss plank heaters must be mounted on fire-resisting insulating material of not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thickness, the legs or supports for the heaters providing an air-space of not less than $\frac{1}{2}$ inch between the back of the heater and the insulating material.

2. Circuits should be run in approved metal conduit. If, however, the location of conductors be such as to provide an air-space of not less than 2 inches on all sides (except from the surface wired over), they may be supported on porcelain knobs or cleats; provided that the knobs or cleats are mounted on fire-resisting insulating material of not less than $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thickness, extending at least 3 inches beyond conductors at either side, the supports raising the conductors not less than $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from the surface wired over, and being not over 12 inches apart.

(h.) Air-pump Motor and Circuits.

1. Circuits must be run in approved metal conduit or in approved moulding, except that when run below the floor of the car they may be supported on porcelain knobs or cleats, provided that the supports raise the conductors at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from the surface wired over and are not over 12 inches apart.

2. Automatic control must be enclosed in an approved metal box. The air-pump and motor, when enclosed, must be in an approved metal box or a wooden box lined with metal of not less than $\frac{1}{32}$ inch in thickness.

When conductors are run in metal conduit, the boxes surrounding the automatic control and air-pump and motor may serve as outlet boxes.

(i.) Main Motor Circuits and Devices.

1. Conductors connecting between trolley stand and main cut-outs or circuit-breakers in hood must be protected where wires enter the car to prevent ingress of moisture.

2. Conductors connecting between the third-rail shoes on the same truck must be supported in an approved fire-resisting insulating moulding, or in approved iron conduit supported by soft rubber or other approved insulating cleats.

3. Conductors on the under-side of the car, except as noted in paragraph 4, must be supported in accordance with one of the following methods:—

(a.) Must be run in approved metal conduit, junction boxes being provided where branches in conduit are made, and where conductors leave conduit the point of issue must be equipped with a suitable conduit or equivalent fitting.

(b.) Or must be run in approved fire-resisting insulating moulding.

(c.) Or must be supported by insulating cleats, the supports being not over 12 inches apart.

4. Conductors, with flame-proof braided outer covering, connecting between controllers at either end of the car, or between controllers and contractors, may be run as a cable, provided that the cable, where exposed to the weather, is encased in a canvas hose or in canvas tape, which must be thoroughly taped or sewed at the ends, where taps from the cable are made, and also where the hose or tape enters the controllers.

Conductors, with or without flame-proof braided outer covering, connecting between controllers at either end of the car, or between controllers and contractors, may be run as a cable, provided that the cable, throughout its entire length, is surrounded by $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch flame-proof covering, thoroughly taped or sewed at ends or where taps from the cable are made, and that the flame-proof covering enters the controllers.

Cables, where run below the floor of a car, may be supported by approved insulating straps or cleats. Where run above the floor of the car, they must be in a metal conduit or metal channel, painted or galvanized both inside and out; and where this channel is so placed as to be exposed to water, as by washing of the car floor, it must either be water-proof or so arranged that water will readily drain out.

Canvas hose or tape or flame-proof material surrounding cables after conductors are in same must have not less than two coats of water-proof insulating material.

5. Motors must be so drilled that, on double truck-cars, the connecting cables can leave them on the side nearest to king-bolt.

6. Resistances must be so located that there will be at least a 6-inch air-space between resistances proper and the fire-resisting material of the car. Must be mounted on iron supports, being insulated therefrom by incombustible bushings or washers; the supports must have at least 2 inches of insulating surface between them and the metal work of the car; or the resistances may be mounted on hardwood bars, supported by iron stirrups, which bars must have not less than 2 inches of insulating surface between the foot of the resistance and the metal stirrup, the entire surface of the bars being covered with at least $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch fire-resisting insulating material.

The insulation of the conductor, for about 6 inches from the terminal of the resistance, should be replaced, if any insulation is necessary, by a porcelain bushing or asbestos sleeve.

7. Controllers must be raised above the platform of the car by a hardwood block not less than 1 inch in thickness, the block being fitted and painted to prevent moisture from working in between it and the platform.

(j.) Lightning-arresters.

1. Must be preferably so located as to protect all auxiliary circuits in addition to main motor circuits.

2. The ground conductor must have a current-carrying capacity not less than that of No. 6 B. and S. gauge copper wire, and be run with as few kinks and bends as possible, and must be securely grounded.

(k.) General Rules.

1. When passing through floors, conductors or cables must be protected by approved incombustible, non-absorptive insulating bushings, which must fit the conductor or cable as closely as possible.

2. Metal moulding must never be concealed (except where readily accessible), and must not be exposed to moisture.

3. Short bends in conductors must be avoided where possible.

4. Sharp edges in conduit or in moulding must be smoothed to prevent injury to conductors.

2. CAR-HOUSES.

(a.) The trolley-wires must be securely supported on insulating hangers.

(b.) The trolley hangers must be placed at such a distance apart that, in case of a break in the trolley-wire, contact with the floor cannot be made.

- (c.) Must have an emergency cut-out switch located at a proper place outside of the building, so that all the trolley-wires in the building may be cut out at one point, and line insulators must be installed so that when this emergency switch is open the trolley-wire will be dead at all points within 100 feet of the building. The current must be cut off from the building when not needed for use in the building.

This may be done by the emergency switch, or, if preferred, a second switch may be used which will cut off all current from the building, but which need not cut off the trolley-wire outside, as would be the case with the emergency switch.

- (d.) All lamps and stationary motors must be installed in such a way that one main switch will control the whole of each installation, lighting, and power, independently of the main cut-out switch called for in Rule (c).

- (e.) Where current for lighting and stationary motors is taken from a grounded trolley circuit, the following special rules must apply:—

1. Cut-outs must be placed between the non-grounded side and the lights or motors which they are to protect. No set or group of incandescent lamps requiring over 2,000 watts must be dependent upon one cut-out.

2. Switches must be placed between the non-grounded side and the lights or motors which they are to protect.

3. Must have all rails bonded at each joint by a conductor having a current-carrying capacity at least equivalent to that of a No. O, B. and S. gauge annealed copper wire, and all rails must be connected to the outside ground return circuit by a copper wire of not less than No. O, B. and S. gauge, or by equivalent bending through the track. All lighting and stationary motor circuits must be thoroughly and permanently connected to the rails, or to the wire leading to the outside ground return circuits.

- (f.) All pendant cords and portable conductors will be considered as subject to hard usage.

- (g.) Except as provided in Rule (e), all wiring and apparatus must be installed in accordance with the rules in Section B.

- (h.) Must not have any system of feeder distribution centreing in the building.

- (i.) Cars must not be left with the trolley in electrical connection with the trolley-wire.

SECTION D.

TESTING.

Wiring in any building must test free from grounds; i.e., the complete installation must have an insulation resistance between conductors and between all conductors and the ground (not including attachments, socket receptacles, etc.) not less than that given in the following table:—

Up to	5 amperes	4,000,000	hms.
„	10 amperes	2,000,000	„
„	25 amperes	800,000	„
„	50 amperes	400,000	„
„	100 amperes	200,000	„
„	200 amperes	100,000	„
„	400 amperes	50,000	„
„	800 amperes	25,000	„
„	1,600 amperes	12,500	„

The test must be made with all cut-outs and safety devices in place. If the lamp sockets, receptacles, fixtures, etc., are also connection, only one-half of resistances specified in the table will be required.

While it is possible, under favourable conditions, to obtain the foregoing insulation resistances, it has been found that it is in many cases difficult to do so, particularly in a new building in which there is a certain amount of moisture present. Where favourable conditions do not obtain, and where it is otherwise clearly evident that the work is satisfactory, rigid compliance with the rule will not be asked for, and the Inspector may modify the requirements of the rule to an extent commensurate with the conditions.

SECTION E.

GROUNDING.

GROUNDING OF LOW POTENTIAL CIRCUITS.

The grounding of low potential circuits under the following regulations is only allowed when such circuits are so arranged that, under normal conditions of service, there will be no passage of current along the ground-wire.

1. Direct-current Three-wire Systems.

- (a.) The neutral wire must be grounded, and the following rules must be complied with:—

1. The ground connection must include all available water and gas pipe systems, and must be made at the central station.

2. In underground systems the neutral wire must also be grounded at each distributing box, through the box.

3. In overhead systems the neutral wire must be grounded every 500 feet in the manner set forth in Rules (c) to (g) below.

4. The ground-wire in direct-current three-wire systems must not, at central stations, be smaller than the neutral wire and not smaller than No. 6 B. and S. gauge elsewhere.

2. Alternating-current Secondary Systems.

- (b.) Transformer secondaries of distributing systems must be grounded, provided that the maximum difference of potential between the grounded point and any other point in the circuit does not exceed 150 volts (except in the case of a three-wire, single-phase secondary system, the neutral wire of which must in all cases be grounded), and the following rules must be complied with:—

1. The ground connection must be made at the neutral point or wire, whenever the neutral point or wire is accessible.

2. When no neutral point or wire is accessible, one side of the secondary circuit must be grounded.

3. Ground connections must be at the transformers and also be made at individual services, if desired; when transformers feed systems having a neutral wire, the neutral wire must also be grounded at least every 500 feet.

- (c.) When the ground connection is inside of any building or the ground-wire is inside of or attached to any building (except central or sub-stations), the ground-wire must be of copper and have an approved rubber insulating covering as required for potentials from 10 to 650 volts.

- (d.) The ground-wire must never be less than No. 6 B. and S. gauge, and on any three-phase system must have a carrying capacity equal to that of any one of the three mains.

- (e.) The ground-wire should, except for central stations and transformer sub-stations, be kept outside of the buildings as far as practicable, but may be directly attached to a building or pole by cleats or straps, or supported on porcelain knobs. Staples must never be used. The wire must be carried in as nearly a straight line as possible, avoiding kinks, coils, and sharp bends, and must be protected where exposed to mechanical injury.

This protection must be secured by the use of approved conduit or its equivalent. The ground-wire on the outside of a building must be in conduit at all places where it is within 7 feet from the ground, unless suitably protected in some equivalent manner.

- (f.) The ground connections for central stations, transformer sub-stations, and banks of transformers must be permanent and effective and must include all available underground piping systems, including the lead sheath of underground cables.

- (g.) For individual transformers and building services the ground connection may be made as in Rule (c) or may be made to water-piping systems running into buildings. This connection may be made by carrying the ground-wire into the cellar and connecting it to the street side of all meters, main cocks, etc.

Where it is necessary to run a ground-wire through any part of a building, unless run in approved conduit, it must be protected by porcelain bushings through walls or partitions and generally treated in the same manner as low potential electric lighting wires.

- (h.) Where the maximum difference of potential between the grounded point and any other point of the circuit exceeds 150 volts, grounding may be required, but such grounding must not be made without written permission from the Inspector. (See exception in Rule (b).)

In connecting a ground-wire to a piping system, the wire should be sweated into a lug attached to an approved clamp, the latter being firmly bolted to the pipe after all rust and scale have been removed; or the wire may be soldered into a brass plug, and the plug forcibly screwed into a pipe fitting, or where the pipes are cast iron, into a hole tapped into the pipe itself. For large stations, where connecting to underground pipes having bell and spigot joints, it is well to connect the several lengths, as the pipe joints may be of rather high resistance.

Where ground-plates are used, a No. 16 Stubb's gauge (No. 14 B. and S. gauge) copper plate, about 3 feet by 6 feet in size, with about 2 feet of crushed coke or charcoal about pea size, both under and over it, would make a ground of sufficient capacity for a moderate-sized station, and would probably answer for the ordinary sub-station or bank of transformers. For a large central station, a plate with considerably more area might be necessary, depending upon the other underground connections available. The ground-wire should be riveted to the plate in a number of places, and soldered for its whole length. Perhaps, even better than a copper plate is a cast-iron plate with projecting forks, the idea of the fork being to distribute the connection to the ground over a fairly broad area, and to give a large surface contact. The ground-wire can probably best be connected to such a cast-iron plate by soldering it into brass plugs screwed into holes tapped in the plate. In all cases the joints between the plates and the ground-wire should be thoroughly protected against corrosion by painting with water-proof paint or some equivalent.

3. Grounding of Conduit, etc.

Ground-wires, except for lightning-arresters, must be of copper, and must have a sectional area in accordance with the following table:—

	Size of Ground-wire required.
For grounding all interior conduits, service pipes, and metal moulding, and where the largest wire in circuit is not larger than No. 8 B. and S. gauge	No. 10 B. and S.
Where the largest wire is greater than No. 0	No. 4 B. and S.
For generator and motor frames, transformer cases and switch-board frames	No. 6 B. and S.
For covers of small apparatus	No. 10 B. and S.

SECTION F.

Maintenance and Operation.

- (a.) All electrical installations must be kept in proper working condition and repair.

To ensure safety of operation, it is necessary to maintain all parts in good condition, to replace or properly repair broken insulators, covers, guards, lost parts, etc., and to maintain good contact on all switches, fuses, etc., and generally to keep every portion of an installation thoroughly effective for the purpose for which it is intended. Special attention is here drawn to ground connections. These must, wherever employed, be considered as an essential part of an installation, and the foregoing remarks, therefore, apply with equal force.

Alterations or extensions to existing installations must comply in all details with the rules laid down in the foregoing sections.

- (b.) Adequate precautions must be taken to prevent any apparatus, conductor, etc., from being accidentally or inadvertently electrically charged when any person is working thereon.

The precautions adopted must be adequate; i.e., in some cases it will be sufficient to take out the switch and hang a notice on it to warn others not to touch it; in other instances it will be necessary to either station a man near the switch to see that no one touches it, to put a lock on the switch, or to take other equally effective measures.

- (c.) Repair or alterations must not be carried out on any live circuit unless the conditions do not permit an interruption of the circuit.

In some instances—for example, where apparatus on a distribution board needs attention—it may be impracticable to make the whole board dead, or it may be necessary to work upon an oil switch, the terminals on the generator side of which cannot be conveniently made dead; exceptions may be made in these and similar instances. In premises containing explosive materials, repairs or alterations must never be carried out on any live circuit.

- (d.) Where necessary, insulating stands, mats, tongs, spanners, boots, gloves, etc., must be provided and must be maintained in good condition.

Local conditions will, to some extent, decide under what conditions such appliances are necessary; e.g., with installations supplied at pressures up to 300 volts, the danger from shock is small, but at high potentials and especially where there is danger of shock by standing upon a damp floor, or touching other conducting material, rubber mats, rubber gloves, and other appliances will be essential.

Where potentials exceeding 1,000 volts are employed, a notice of a permanent character must be placed where it will be observed by those concerned, forbidding any one to work on any apparatus or conductors without either having them made dead, or, if this be not possible, without using rubber gloves, insulated spanners, rubber mats, etc., and taking all such precautions as may, under the circumstances, be necessary to prevent danger.

The use of rickety boxes, stools, unserviceable ladders, etc., must be strictly forbidden.

The appliances referred to by the rule must be kept always in the same place, which must be convenient and central, so that those concerned will know where to find them.

- (e.) In all premises in which electrical energy of a higher potential than 300 volts is used, institutions as to treatment of persons suffering from electric shocks must be fixed in plain view in some prominent situation.

- (f.) Inflammable material must be kept at a distance of at least 1 foot from any apparatus or fittings, except in cases where these are provided with covers or other effective protection.

For example, silks, lace curtains, etc., must not be placed near to incandescent lights; and oil, gasoline, excelsior and shavings, etc., must not be placed near any motor, lamps, or apparatus in which heat is generated or in which sparking is liable to occur.

- (g.) Passage-ways around switchboards, motors, or apparatus must be kept clear of any obstruction.

The passage-ways around switchboards, etc., not normally being used for other purposes, are frequently looked upon as convenient places in which to store waste, cans of oil, packing-cases, etc. This is a dangerous practice, not only from the point of view of fire, but also because such articles seriously interfere with the operation of or any repairs or alterations to the switchboard, etc.

- (h.) All those parts of premises containing electrical apparatus requiring attention while in operation must be adequately lighted.

Efficient lighting is essential, if electrical apparatus has to be attended to while it is alive.

The switches for the lights called for in this rule must be outside the danger zone; e.g., lights may be needed in the pit of a larger motor, but the switches must be situated at some point outside the pit.

- (i.) A competent man must be kept on duty where generators are operating.

DEFINITIONS.

In these Regulations the following terms shall be interpreted in the sense herein defined. Other words or terms used which are not specifically defined shall be interpreted in their usually accepted sense.

"Accessible" means not only that any equipment, apparatus, etc., to which the term is applied shall be within easy reach, but that it must also be safe for any one to get at.

For example, a switch may be placed in a position within reach, but in order to operate it one may have to stoop under a running belt, or reach over a machine, etc.; such a position will not be considered as "accessible" or "easy of access."

"Inaccessible" or "remote from access" means that any equipment or apparatus, etc., to which the term is applied shall be so placed that unauthorized persons cannot, except deliberately, touch or tamper with it.

"Combustible" means that the materials to which the term is applied will ignite and burn or smoulder.

"Fire-proof" means incapable of being ignited, or even of smouldering.

"Inflammable material" means any material which will readily burst into flame; e.g., wood shavings, oils, light draperies, celluloid, etc.

"Damp places" are any premises, room, or portion thereof in which the presence of moisture, either permanently or intermittently, is such as would injuriously affect the insulation of an installation suitable for ordinary conditions, and would greatly increase the risk of shock and fire, owing to the reduced insulation resistance to ground and between conductors.

"Premises containing corrosive liquids or vapours" means any premises, room, or portion thereof in which an installation would be subjected to injurious chemical action due to the presence of such liquids or vapours.

"Premises containing explosive materials" means any premises, room, or portion thereof in which explosive materials in solid, liquid, pulverized, or gaseous form are exposed in such a way as to constitute risk of fire or explosion.

The term "theatre" shall mean a building or that part of a building regularly or frequently used for dramatic, operatic, moving-picture, or other performances or shows, or which has a stage for such performances used with scenery or other stage appliances.

"Supply Authority."—By this term is meant any person, company, or corporation, municipal or otherwise, supplying electrical energy for other than his or their own use.

"Switchboards."—By this term is meant a collection of switches and other controlling, regulating, and indicating devices assembled together on one or more panels, all mounted on a suitable frame, and used for the control and regulation of the main sources of electrical supply. They are to be distinguished from "panels" on which are grouped fuses and switches used for the control of branch circuits throughout a building, and which are placed at the various branch distribution centres, or used for the control of individual apparatus, such as motors, vapour lamps, rectifiers, etc.

"Approved."—By this term is meant any material, fitting, or device which is listed in the revised list of approved fittings of the Underwriters' Laboratories (Incorporated), of Chicago, or any such material, fitting, or device which may have been submitted to the Inspector and for the use of which approval has been granted, in writing, by the Inspector.

"Inspector."—By the word "Inspector" is meant the Inspector or other official appointed by the Minister to have the supervision of the work, and shall extend to and include any officer or other official acting under the instructions of the Inspector, and all instructions, directions, or permits given or decisions made by any one acting for the Inspector shall be subject to the approval of the Inspector, and may be cancelled, altered, modified, and changed as the Inspector may deem fit; provided always, and it is hereby understood, that any act on the part of the Inspector in connection with and in virtue of these regulations, and any instructions, directions, or permits given or decisions made by the Inspector or any one acting for the Inspector, shall be subject to the approval of or modification or cancellation by the Minister.

"Minister."—By the word "Minister" is meant the person holding the position or acting in the capacity of the Minister of the Interior of Canada for the time being, and shall include the person holding the position or acting in the capacity of the Deputy Minister of the Interior of Canada for the time being.

PERMITS AND LICENCES.

No person shall do any work in Dominion Parks in connection with electrical installations without first securing a licence from the Superintendent of the Park concerned, the Superintendent to be first satisfied that the applicant is qualified for such work. The fee for such licence shall be $1, and the licence shall expire on the 31st day of March next following date of issue.

Each person holding such a licence shall promptly notify the Superintendent of the Park of any electrical installation, or repairs or extensions to any installation, he may engage upon, in order that an inspection may be made.

No electrical installation may be used until such installation has been certified as being satisfactory by the Inspector or other official appointed for such purpose by the Minister.

A fee of $1 shall be paid for each certificate of inspection issued and shall be deposited to the credit of the Receiver-General.

The Inspector may enter upon, at any reasonable hour, the stage or other portion of a theatre, moving-picture establishment, or other places of public assembly wherein electrical energy is used for light, heat, or other purposes, either temporarily or permanently, for the purpose of examining the electrical equipment therein or for the purpose of witnessing its use in such places; and he may also enter upon any other premises, at any reasonable hour, for a like purpose.

Any company, corporation, or individual supplying electrical energy within the limits of the Park shall, upon written notice from the Inspector to the effect that the electric wiring, apparatus, etc., in any premises is in an unsafe condition, discontinue, within forty-eight hours, the electric service or services from such wires, etc., and must not reconnect the case without a written permit from the Inspector to do so.

PENALTY FOR NON-OBSERVANCE OF RULES AND REGULATIONS.

Any corporation, company, contractor, or individual violating any of the foregoing Rules and Regulations shall be subject to the penalties set out in section 20 of the Dominion "Forest Reserves and Parks Act," chapter 10, R.S., 1-2, George V.
